BLIZZARD CYCLONE HIT WEST

Reports from the West tell of fierce blizzards raging in Nebraska and Michigan and a cyclone in Southern Missouri.

Heavy property and stock loss is indicated by the snowstorm, while reports thus far received regarding the windstorm point to heavy damage to property and many casualties.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Jan. 29.—The heaviest snow storm of the year in Michigan is centred in and around Grand Rapids. While the whole western part of the State is more or less enveloped in sixteen inches of snow. A rain storm from the south and a cold wave from the north met about midnight. Soon a blizzard was raging, and this morning from twelve to eighteen inches of snow covered the city and outlying districts.

The street car traffic was completely paralyzed and thousands had to walk to their work. All trains to the south, west and north of here are running, although terribly handicapped. No one remembers a storm in the history of Michigan when snow fell so fast and persistently as it did last night and to-day.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 29.—Propelled by a hurricane gale of ninety miles an hour the fiercest blizzard in twenty years grips Nebraska prairies to-day. Fatalities are reported in the sparsely settled western district and thousands of cattle are given up for lost on the ranges.

The blinding snow is piling high into huge drifts and railroad traffic is necessarily impeded that the abandonment of all trains is threatened. Street cars are stranded in Lincoln and Omaha and all telegraph wires to west and north are down.

SEDALIA, Mo., Jan. 29.—Two persons are seriously hurt, a score of others are slightly injured and a property loss of $50,000 forces the residents of Lamont, twelve miles west of this place, as the result of a cyclone which swept through there early last evening.

The path of the storm, which came from the southwest, was only about forty feet in width, but it destroyed everything within its reach. The Lamont Opera House, a two-story brick building, was wrecked, the roof and walls of the Missouri Pacific freight depot were demolished and the roof and heavy timbers of the opera house and the roof of the freight depot were deposited upon the top of a freight train at the station.

C. S. Kemp was struck with a flying timber and probably fatally wounded.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 29.—A heavy wind storm that swept Oklahoma and parts of Missouri reached St. Louis early to-day in the shape of a northwest gale. In St. Joseph a heavy rain fell, culverts and bridges were washed out. At Enid, Oklahoma, Guthrie, Nashville, Carmen and other Oklahoma towns there were wind and dust storms.

ENID, Okla., Jan. 29.—Damage to the amount of thousands of dollars was done by high winds in Enid, Okbene, Guthry, Nashville, Carmen and other towns in northern Oklahoma yesterday afternoon. Barns and houses were wrecked and a few business houses partially wrecked.

KIERAN GIVES UP IN FIDELITY SUIT

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Patrick J. Kieran, head of the Fidelity Funding Company, which recently failed for $3,000,000, appeared to-day before Referee in Bankruptcy Peter B. Olney to be sworn and accept service, by which proceeding the federal government takes precedence in the case. Up to this time there has been a conflict between the two hearings.

"AFFINITY" TEST FOR JURORS IN TRIAL OF MRS. MARTHA DUNPHY

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—The affinity question became a definite issue to-day in the trial of Mrs. Martha Mabelle Dunphy, wife of a wealthy physician of Boston, for alleged theft of jewels and securities belonging to Charles E. Giles, a money lender of Boston. Attorney James T. Brady, in the examination of veniremen, asked questions regarding their views toward affinities that brought out repeated objections from Prosecutor William C. Rittenhouse and prevented the selection of any further jurors.

"Who's most at fault, the affinity or the affinity seeker, in your opinion?" asked Mr. Brady.

"I object to the divorce courts settle that question," protested Mr. Rittenhouse.

"Well, I want to know what these men think about it. There are some people who believe that a man ought to run around with the morals of a goat and that a woman ought to be locked up in a convent," Mr. Brady retorted.

Nearly all of the veniremen said that they had read affinity stories in the newspapers with great interest. Many of them were disqualified by their answers.

It was expected that no difficulty would be had in getting a jury, but the test proved difficult.

"What kind of stories have you read in the newspapers," one gray-bearded man was asked.

"I read the jokes, the divorce cases and look at the pictures. In Summer I read about baseball," was the answer this disappointed the crowded courtroom.

Mrs. Dunphy sat at the defendant's table and took deep interest in the work of selecting the men who are to decide her fate. She wore a black silk dress and a hat with a green feather, over which a heavy black lace veil was drawn.

Several times she formed questions for Mr. Brady to propound to the jurors.

Giles, her accuser, sat on the other side of the table and the couple never once looked at each other.

PEASANTS IN RIOTS WHIP IRISH POLICE

DUBLIN, Jan. 29.—The village of Kilfinane, County of Limerick, is to-day in the hands of an army of rioting peasants, who, after a night of fighting with the police, finally drove the latter to the shelter of their barracks.

A heavy detail of constabulary has been sent to the town with instructions to use all the force required to suppress the riot.

The trouble started last night when an effort was made to evict several peasants. The peasants barricaded themselves in their houses and drove the police away by throwing boiling water on them. The police retired to await reinforcements. In the meantime the peasants throughout the entire district flocked to the aid of the besieged peasants. A free-for-all fight took place when the police returned.

A second time the police sought reinforcements, but the peasants with sticks and stones drove them to their barracks. The fight lasted all night and many persons were injured. The disturbances in the Kilfinane district are in wretched destitution and are unable to pay their rent. They have protested to the landlords against eviction, but their appeals have gone unheeded. Now the peasants propose to fight for shelter and food.

JIMMY COLLINS HAS NEW JOB

BUFFALO, Jan. 29.—Jimmy Collins, who managed the Boston Americans when they were world's champions, to-day signed to manage the Minneapolis team of the American Association.

Collins has had numerous offers to manage clubs ever since he was handed his unconditional release by Connie Mack of the Athletics. It was thought at one time that he would hook up with the Buffalo Club of the Eastern League, but after a talk with the owners of the Minneapolis team in Chicago a few days ago the former green third baseman decided to cast his lot with the Millers.

Minneapolis finished fifth in the race last year. Among the members of the team was Buck Freeman, the old Boston slugger.

DR. BULL GOES SOUTH IN LAST HOPE FOR LIFE

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Dr. William T. Bull, the eminent physician and surgeon, who has been so near death from cancer for many weeks, started his trip to Savannah to-day.

At the Plaza, where Dr. Bull had a suite of rooms, every effort was made to have the distinguished surgeon slipped out of the hotel without attracting attention. Mrs. Bull sent word to the newspaper men that the start would not be made to-day, but this ruse did not work. Dr. Bull was taken in a stretcher from the Fifty-ninth street entrance of the Plaza about 11 o'clock. Four men carried him and he was followed by two physicians and his wife.

Hotel attendants sent in to the street precipitated a row with photographers. The police interfered, but no arrests were made. Dr. Bull knew nothing of the disturbance as he was wrapped from head to heels in blankets.

FEAR DISPUTE, HOLD UP BILLS

To prevent an impending dispute between the Senate and House over the reference of labor bills to a committee made up entirely of lawyers, Senator Thorndike Spalding of Cambridge, Senate chairman of the Judiciary Committee, to-day announced that public hearings on all labor measures will be postponed until both branches have concurred in the committee references. The Senate has referred the anti-injunction bill, peaceful picketing bill and other labor measures to publicity. The House demands that they be sent to the Judiciary and Labor Committees, sitting jointly.

The bill to provide that labor unions shall not be enjoined from doing their business to capture a strike, proposed by Senator Francis W. Dickinson of Springfield, was scheduled for a hearing to-day. It will be heard later with the other labor measures.

RECEIVER FOR BOLT CO.

Judge Brown, in the United States District Court to-day, appointed Torrance Parker receiver for the Boston Bolt Company of No. 40 Farnsworth street, South Boston. The indebtedness of the concern is about $65,000, but its promoters claim assets in excess of this figure. The receiver's bond is $25,000.

CHEER AS CHAPMAN NAILS LIE

The Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman created a profound sensation at the big Tremont Temple evangelical meeting at noon to-day by announcing that it had been reported that he had been guaranteed $10,000 personally before he would consent to come to Boston.

Tremont Temple was packed. There may have been 3,500 people there. When Dr. Chapman calmly got up and read the statement there was breathless silence following his conclusion, and then there were heavily hand clappings.

The announcement was a surprise, it is safe to say to every one there, with the exception of one or two whom Dr. Chapman had taken into his confidence. It is also safe to say that when the world famed evangelist had made his statement that there was not a single believer there who did not obliterate that sentence mentally instanter.

Dr. Chapman's Statement.

This is the statement that Dr. Chapman read:

"The statement was made to me yesterday by a gentleman in the city that he had been told by one who professed to know that I had declined to come to Boston for the present evangelistic campaign unless I was guaranteed personally $10,000. It is my rule never to reply to public criticisms; only the position of my friend in the city leads me to do so in this case.

"This statement is absolutely and unqualifiedly false, and must have been made by some one entirely ignorant of the facts. I have not been guaranteed one penny as a compensation nor has any other evangelist in the city, nor has Mr. Alexander. We will receive nothing for our work unless the people decide themselves to make an offering at the close of the services, and then they must do it in their own way.

"There has been no year for the past five years in which I have not been obliged to raise personally from seven to ten thousand dollars, above all offerings received, to care for the deficit in these city campaigns.

"J. WILBUR CHAPMAN."

Dr. Conrad Indignant.

Following the announcement of Dr. Chapman, the Rev. Dr. Conrad, pastor of the Park Street Church, took the platform. He was religiously indignant that such a report had been circulated.

"I would the statement made to Dr. Chapman," he said. "It was made by a reputable business man of Boston. I know that this man heard the report.

"I want to say that I have conducted the correspondence with Dr. Chapman in relation to this work. Never was a single

ESSEX DAM BILL HEARING POSTPONED

The Essex dam bill, providing for a boom across the Merrimac River at Lawrence, to safeguard canoeists and swimmers from being carried over the dam, was postponed until February 10, because Representative William J. Grinkme of Lawrence, the petitioner, had been overlooked when bottles of the hearing were sent out.

IN JUDICIARY COMMITTEE.

Attorney Auger of New Bedford to-day asked the Legislative Committee on Judiciary to report a bill making writs in civil actions returnable within fourteen days instead of thirty days as at present.

Representative Perry of New Bedford asked for a bill to provide that "a person attached shall, by payment of a keeper's fee, be permitted to continue to do business."

CALLS FOR ALL FACTS

FITCHBURG, Jan. 29.—That Mrs. Ellen Hessell, mother of Mrs. Alfred I. Cate, did not die in the Burbank Hospital of natural causes Dr. George P. Norton early this morning declared to the executive committee of the institution, now investigating the marvelous charges made against its conduct.

Mayor M. Fred O'Connell this afternoon issued a proclamation calling upon all citizens of Fitchburg who have evidence to offer regarding the hospital management to present it to the executive committee. The Mayor and each member of the executive committee signed the proclamation.

Mrs. Ellen Hessell was removed to the Burbank Hospital on October 3, at my suggestion," said the doctor to the committeemen, shortly after midnight to-day, during the investigation.

"She was suffering from rheumatism and bed sores.

"I don't believe this woman died of natural causes. I tell you so plainly. The trouble she was suffering from could not have caused her death. She died in eighteen days after admission to the hospital. I do not know what caused her death, but I do not belief that she died of natural causes."

The Mayor in his proclamation calling for all of the citizens of Fitchburg who have anything to say regarding the hospital management said that many of the statements made publicly regarding the conduct of the affairs of the hospital and regarding evidence obtained at the hearings have been exaggerated and aggravated.

Here is Mayor O'Connell's proclamation:

Mayor's Office,

Fitchburg, Mass., Jan. 29, 1909.

To the Public:

In view of the exaggerated reports and gross misrepresentations since the investigation into the affairs of the Burbank Hospital began, both as regards details of evidence presented by witnesses who have appeared and the latitude of the executive committee with respect to the conduct of the investigation, it is deemed advisable, in justice to the investigating committee, the Burbank Hospital, and more especially the public, that a statement should be made respecting the matter in order that the facts may be known.

In the first place, it is not true that the executive committee have sought by any means to keep the facts from the public. On the contrary, on the first day of the hearing, the members of the committee, unanimously, took the position that, in view of what had been made public through the letter which had been given to the newspapers by David I. Walsh, Esq., the public should know all the evidence as it was presented to the committee. The first obstacle to the accomplishment of this was Mr. Walsh's statement that, while the committee pledged itself not to give out any of

LYNN MAYOR SAYS POLICE SHIELD CRIME

Declaring that the Lynn Police Department is inefficient; that he has evidence to show that protection is granted to wrongdoers, and that punishment to evildoers follows crime in Lynn, Mayor James E. Rich to-day issued a statement in which he charges the removal of the heads of departments, shake up the entire force and take control of the police organization himself if radical changes are not made at once. The statement is considered an emphatic rebuke to Chief of Police Thomas M. Burgess, who has held the office for the last twenty years. Mayor Rich said:

"The Lynn Police Department must show an improvement in the enforcement of the law. Failure to do so will mean the removal of the heads of departments. The department is entirely lacking in discipline and is inadequate in service. The Lynn police station, as popularly referred to as an "old ladies' home."

"I propose to hold the reins of the police administration myself. The present officials have attempted to run the organization under the head of one chief. Evidence has come to me that not all criminals are punished. That evil must be corrected.

"If no immediate improvement is shown I shall appoint a full board and appoint a new chief of police March 1."

HARVARD EXPERT AT DEATH TRIAL TELLS OF POISONED LIQUOR

LOWELL, Jan. 29.—Professor William Z. Whitney of the Harvard Medical School, a witness in the trial of Napoleon Rivet, charged with the murder of Joseph Gallioux February 29, to-day testified that he found traces of sulphuric acid in the contents of a whiskey glass found near the dead body of Gallioux.

Professor Whitney was on the stand when court adjourned for the noon recess. He was questioned by Assistant District Attorney Wier. Professor Whitney further testified that the symptoms noticed by Gallioux after drinking two glasses of whiskey with Rivet were consistent with those of sulphuric acid poisoning.

"I examined the contents of the white beer glass sent to me," said Professor Whitney, "and found small quantities of sulphuric acid. I also examined a portion of the dead man's heart and there was sulphuric acid in the blood."

Professor Whitney then stated that there were no traces of blood upon Rivet's clothing which had been sent to him by the police for examination.

Mixes Poison and Whiskey.

He did state that Gallioux's tongue, which he examined, had a spot of discoloration probably caused by an irritant and consistent with an application of sulphuric acid.

"I took whiskey," said Professor Whitney, "and mixed it with the quantity of acid. The result was an dark colored liquid of the same color as the contents of the whiskey glass found near Gallioux's body.

"I believe the symptoms shown by Gallioux were consistent with sulphuric acid poisoning. Although the burns shown on his tongue if caused by acid would not have caused his death, they would have probably resulted in ulcers, which would have caused his death later."

The police theory is that Gallioux, who was found dead with a bullet crashed into, in a plumbing shop on Hall street, is that Rivet knocked him down with a blow on the head, forced sulphuric acid into his mouth and then turned on the gas.

Effort was made to-day to identify the cigarette stub testimony offered by the State.

Police Inspector Charles Lallamme, who testified yesterday that he picked up in the Hall street plumbing shop where the body of Joseph Gallioux was found, the stub of a certain cigarette, known as a Sweet Caporal or Little Cigar, was asked to-day by Attorney William H. Bent, counsel for Rivet:

"Do you smoke?"

"Yes," answered Lallamme. "Say, I don't smoke Sweet Caporal Little Cigars."

"Well," asked Bent, "is Rivet the only man in Lowell who smokes them?"

"I don't think so," admitted the inspector.

Conflict in Testimony.

The courtroom was jammed when the case was resumed to-day, over 200 people were turned away, scores of them were among them. Rivet, as usual, was calm and composed.

Inspector Lallamme, in answer to questions by Assistant District Attorney Charles A. Weir, said that Rivet had told him Lallamme that he left Richards's barbershop on Moody street at 9:30 o'clock and went to the night of the murder. It was then he testified that Rivet left the place at 10:15.

Attorney Bent, for the defence, then secured his admission from Lallamme that other than in Lowell on night there was the same cigarette which Rivet did, the same kind as the stub found near the body of Gallioux.

Lallamme was required to go over again in detail the version given by Rivet of the fourteen police and Rivet's story of his own movements on the murder night. Lallamme said Rivet had talked without hesitation and that the only discrepancy between his story and testimony so far was regarding the time Rivet and Augustin Richards's saloon to leave the barbershop. Inspector Lallamme testified that Rivet said he took the drinks of whiskey on Saturday morning when the body was found before going to church and that he made no point of what the officers said when coming out of church and asked him to go to the police station.

Deputy Superintendent of Police Reginald Welch testified:

Discovers Blood Stain.

"I found a red stain on Rivet's sleeve and said to him, 'That looks like blood.' 'Yes,' he said, 'it must have come from a little cut I had on my hand. He showed me a cut, but it was not bleeding then. Afterwards he said, 'I know now where that spot came from. Your shirt got wet on my neck and I looked, but couldn't see the blood.'

Mrs. Frederick St. Hilaire has been a strong witness for the State, testifying that Rivet was in the Doyle saloon the night when Mrs. St. Hilaire also was there. Mrs. St. Hilaire said she saw Napoleon Rivet in the saloon door Saturday night, February 27, that he was walking by the saloon on Moody street. There is an electric light at the corner of Hall and Moody streets. Rivet's face was toward her and I bowed to him. He bowed in return.

"It was 10:30 o'clock at night when I saw Rivet," Mrs. Hilaire went on. "I looked at the time three or four minutes before I saw Rivet and I looked at the time when I saw Rivet pass Lee's door. I did not notice how Rivet was dressed that night.

"My husband went toward Moody street to buy some beer and I went to Lee Wing Seale's store to get Moody street. My husband had been gone two or three minutes before I saw Rivet pass Lee's door.

"Rivet had not said before that day any particular attention to me. He invited me to go to a wedding with him, but I did not go. I cannot say how or when I got acquainted with Rivet. I do not remember who introduced me to him. I never had any trouble with Rivet. Rivet was about two steps from me when I bowed to him. When he did not return my salute I felt certain it was Rivet.

How the finding of the cigarette butt made Rivet talk with the police about his movements on February 29 and tell them of conversations he had had with Gallioux, and the fact that he held an expensive policy the murdered man had taken out, Inspector Lallamme told just before court adjourned for the day. He said:

"I found a stub of a cigarette in the Gallioux office. I showed it to Lieut. John Freeman of the Lowell police department. He returned it to me and yesterday I gave it to State Officer Byrne. Merely Inspector Mahar found in Rivet's pockets a packet of cigarettes, money and a memorandum book. The stub of the cigarette found in Daigle's office and cigarettes found in Rivet's clothing resemble each other.

"In the inspector's office before he was taken to jail Rivet said during the day, February 29, he was with a young man named Morrissette. Saturday night Rivet told of being for a time in the company of Gallioux. Rivet left the police station at 10:15 p. m. February 29. Rivet said he went to McGrane's saloon on Suffolk street and through Moody street to Richard's saloon, and that he left the latter place at 11 p. m. Rivet said he had not wish to ring the bell at the boarding house, as he did not hire the room by the week. The next week's rent was much room to have some beans and the next day he went to Gallioux's home, where he slept that night.

Returned to Lowell.

"Rivet admitted he returned to Lowell February 27, two weeks before February 29 he said he roomed with Gallioux in Mr. and Mrs. Vincent's house on Race street. Rivet said he frequently saw Gallioux' life had been transferred to him in security for money loaned. He said he thought Gallioux knew of the insurance on the life insurance policy obtained and transferred. Rivet said his store-in-law let him live when he left the latter. He told us of giving liquor to his brother-in-law, of his breaking up the home and that time Gallioux was dead and buried.

"When asked by Patrolman William Geagon to come to the police station he asked if it was in connection with the Gallioux murder. Geagon would not say to him and he was escorted to the police station by Geagon and Patrolman Daigle.

John A. McLoughlin of Tucker street, who lives on the corner of Tucker street and Hall streets, said that he saw a man whom he identified as Rivet in the saloon. The man was dressed in black and was standing before the light in the front of the saloon. After Rivet had been arrested he was asked to step out in the hall and there he was asked to look at the stub that night. He had picked out the stub from a number of others on the table.

Whether they stood up beside the accused not to show their general resemblance, Mr. Mahar said he knew, but both are smooth-faced and dark-featured.

GIVE UP BALL TO AID PRIEST

This year the Catholic Young Men's Association has decided not to hold their annual reunion, popularly known as "The College Ball," but to unite and help Rev. Thomas J. Gargan, president of Boston College, make financially successful a great popular demonstration in Mechanics' building after Lent for the purpose of raising funds for the new college buildings.

The Young Men's Catholic Association reunion is the great pre-Lental Catholic social affair that Greater Boston enjoys each year. It is eagerly looked forward to from year to year by hundreds.

The date of the reunion this year on the association's program is to remain secret.

DOUGLAS ROBINSON TO PROSECUTE LIBEL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Douglas Robinson, President Roosevelt's brother-in-law, has instructed Secretary Loeb to become the complainant in the proposed prosecution against the New York World and other papers for alleged libel in connection with the Panama Canal publications. This announcement was made at the White House to-day.

BEAUTY DOCTOR

Says the New Method Increases the Bust Measurement and Rounds the Arms and Neck.

(BY CLARA BELLE M.)

From Chicago Examiner.

"Speaking of the many beneficial experiences and lines of treatment that have been successfully tested in the past few years," said Madame Monsanz, "Madame Monsanz really owed her great success to a most remarkable discovery by the use of a simple preparation which is used constantly and faithfully to round arms and neck, breast accomplished with most wonderful results and I am glad to say that the delight of natural, graceful lines has been a development of hygienic treatment. Many women have used firmness from the beneficial use of the following: Obtain from any druggist two ounces of glycerine and one ounce Jamaica ginger. Eighteen grains of powdered gum, mix and let stand several hours. Then add one pint of witch hazel, two level teaspoonfuls of powdered saxolite, shake well and apply to the neck, arms and bust, rubbing and massaging the parts until completely absorbed. This wash the parts treated with very full and rounded lines and free from drooping. Apply the treatment morning and night and within a few weeks' time the most exquisite proportions and beautiful lines of neck and arms will reward you.

Most druggist have these ingredients on hand. If they cannot be readily procured, the following will be forwarded, postpaid, upon receipt of price: Saxolite, 50 cents; glycerine, 25 cents; ginger, 25 cents; gum arabic, 25 cents; prescription filling, will doubtless supply them.

To reach Wolf's "My Clothier," cor. Hanover and Portland streets, by the Washington street tunnel, passengers going south should leave at Friend street exit; those going north at Union street.

MRS. STEVENS, WHO BECAME BRIDE IN WESTERN ROMANCE

LYNN FRIENDS PLAN WELCOME TO FAIR BRIDE

Scores of young people in Lynn social circles were delighted to-day to learn of the wedding of Miss Jennie Turnbull of that city, and George Stevens, formerly of Somerville, but now of Kansas City. The wedding, which took place last night in Chicago, is the result of a pretty little romance which began in Lynn a year ago. Her friends are planning a royal welcome to them when they visit Lynn.

Miss Turnbull, who is twenty-four years of age, has for some years been a demonstrator in the employ of the General Electric Company and has traveled all over the country. Mr. Stevens also an employe of the General Electric Company, holds an important position as the representative of the company in Kansas City.

Before he went West he was in the office of the company in Lynn while his home was in Somerville. It was while engaged in working for the company that Mr. Stevens and Miss Turnbull met.

She was demonstrating for the General Electric in Chicago and visiting with friends in Chicago, when Mr. Stevens wrote her asking why they should wait longer to be married. Would they meet from Kansas City and the knot could be tied without further delay. She consented. He came East and now they are husband and wife.

Mrs. George H. Goldthwait of No. 112 West Neptune street, Lynn, is Miss Turnbull's mother. For several years her pretty and capable daughter has been living with her grandmother, Mrs. Nicholas Turnbull, on 50 Light street, Lynn. Both mother and grandmother are to-day eagerly awaiting letters from Mrs. Stevens, telling of her marriage in detail.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevens plan to come to Lynn and Somerville on their honeymoon trip. After that they will return to Kansas City, where they will make their future home. Mr. Stevens, like Miss Turnbull, is in addition with the General Electric before she married, as that company has lost one of its best demonstrators.

THIS KIND MAN IS DEPORTED

The maddest young man in the United States to-day is probably Francesco Gallo of New York, who is to be deported back to Italy from this port to-morrow for eloping on limbecile Italian boy over here. What makes Gallo so angry is that he is simply trying to oblige his friend, the boy's father, in New York.

Gallo is foreign buyer for a New York importing house. The White Star line will carry him free in the steerage, but he will have to pay if he wants first-cabin fare. He will have to pay his way back as an ordinary passenger, and that will be all right, but about two months in all at the height of the Spring importing season.

MAYOR WARDWELL IS UP FOR MAYOR AGAIN

Mayor Walter C. Wardwell of Cambridge to-day broke the silence that he has maintained for the last two months, and in a letter to former Mayor Edgar R. Chamolin announced his candidacy for a third term as Mayor of Cambridge. Mr. Chamolin, ex-Representative James F. Aylward, one of the four candidates for the Democratic municipal nomination, today announced that he would start an campaign on a rally in Institute Hall, silver Cambridge, Monday night.

CASE OF DERELICT GIRL IS DEFAULTED

The case of nineteen-year-old Hattie Krebs of No. 20 Norfolk street, Dorchester, charged with being a neglected child, was defaulted today in Dorchester District Court. The girl was put in temporary charge of the Children's Aid Society a week, and it is supposed the society neglected to appear in court.

Mimi Aguglia and her company of Sicilian players, who have been giving an extended series of special matinees at the Majestic Theatre, close their engagement with the presentation this afternoon of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Carbonari." Yesterday afternoon they gave "Before the Tempest." In this tragedy Signora Aguglia plays the role of a surgeon's wife who stirs up adventurous who has ensnared her husband.

40 FLEE FIRE IN TENEMENT IN WEST END

More than forty men, women and children were driven into the bitter cold of early morning and there was tremendous excitement just short of a panic when a fire was discovered at 3:20 a. m. to-day in the four-story brick tenement on the northeast corner of Leverett and Spring streets, West End. The fire was in the confectionery and cigar shop of J. Hanopoulos. The smoke got well up through the halls and was creeping through the cracks and keyholes into the homes of the six families on the three floors above the shop before any discovered it.

The families discovered their danger at about the same moment. With excitement gathering fast, the fathers and mothers ran screaming from room to room rousing the sleepy children out of their beds and snatching any clothing they could find, wrapped up the smaller children and stumbled with them down the three flights of stairs through smoke-filled halls to the street.

Tenants Almost Frozen.

Frazie Musclanes, the only Italian in the house, tried to find out from the other tenants what the trouble was, but could not. But they were too excited to tell him and thought only of their families. He managed to get down to the street and turn in an alarm.

With the engines came a squad of policemen from the Joy street station and they quickly established fire lines and something like order. The other tenants, who were almost frozen before the other neighbors could be roused, began to run back and take them in temporarily.

The fire damage had no trouble putting out the blaze. The damage is $400. The origin of the fire is unknown.

The occupants of the building who were driven out are:

Second floor (front): Harry Kurland and three children, Bessie, Sage 7, Idelle, 5, and Rose, 4 (rear), Isaac Baker, his wife Annie and two children, Sarah, 12, and Moses, 8, and four lodgers, Miss Mamie Cohen, Abraham Shaffer and Samuel and Max Minsky.

Third floor (front): Samuel Rosenblatt, his wife Sarah, and William, Joseph and Ida Rosenfield and three lodgers, Mr. Jacobs, Mr. Isaac Lein, and Mrs. Rosenfield (rear), Joseph Davidson, his wife Annie, and their children, Bessie, Jacob, Davidson, and Jacob Shuster, his wife Pauline and their children, Leah, 11, and Moses, 13.

Fourth floor (front): Christopher Bandi, Nicolas Zilla, Peter Mitchell, Costa Nicola and Christo Nicola (rear), Mrs. Pauline Mondello and son Anthony, and Mr. Brazie Musclani, his wife Annie and their two children, Annie, age 12, and Salvator, 10.

MYSTERIOUS FIRE DRIVES 15 FROM BED INTO STREET

A mysterious fire which burned out the grocery store of Joseph Bruno and the rear tenement on the first floor of the building, 278 Athens street, South Boston, and drove fifteen sleeping in the two tenements above of age, has for some years been a demonstrator in the employ of the General Electric Company and has traveled all over the country. Mr. Stevens also an employe of the General Electric Company, holds an important position as the representative of the company in Kansas City.

Before he went West he was in the office of the company in Lynn while his home was in Somerville. It was while engaged in working for the company that Mr. Stevens and Miss Turnbull met.

She was demonstrating for the General Electric in Chicago and visiting with friends in Chicago, when Mr. Stevens wrote her asking why they should wait longer to be married. Would they meet from Kansas City and the knot could be tied without further delay. She consented. He came East and now they are husband and wife.

Mrs. George H. Goldthwait of No. 112 West Neptune street, Lynn, is Miss Turnbull's mother. For several years her pretty and capable daughter has been living with her grandmother, Mrs. Nicholas Turnbull, on 50 Light street, Lynn. Both mother and grandmother are to-day eagerly awaiting letters from Mrs. Stevens, telling of her marriage in detail.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevens plan to come to Lynn and Somerville on their honeymoon trip. After that they will return to Kansas City, where they will make their future home. Mr. Stevens, like Miss Turnbull, is in addition with the General Electric before she married, as that company has lost one of its best demonstrators.

YOUNG'S HOTEL GUESTS SCARED BY NEARBY FIRE

Late sleepers at Young's Hotel were given a little flurry by a fire in the basement of the Rogers building adjoining the hotel on the Washington street side at 6:30 a. m. to-day. When the engines came whistling along Washington street and other apparatus joined in the general clatter, hotel windows were raised and tumbled out for dangling ropes.

The fire was in the basement of the Crescent Shoe Company at No. 297 Washington street, one of the many concerns in the Rogers Building. The blaze was caused by defective wiring and did $10 damage. The firemen found the basement pretty smoky and some of them came out into the air with their eyes red and weeping a bit from close quarters with the smoke.

The morning rush of commuters up from the North Station and the regular rush of clerks and stenographers on their way to office on State street and adjoining thoroughfares halted in the vicinity, looking for some excitement.

FLAMES DRIVE FAMILY TO STREET IN NIGHT CLOTHES

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Jan. 29.—The Krafusky Building, a two and one-half story frame office building on Main, 8804 Howard street, occupied on the street floor by a wholesale and retail liquor dealer, on the second floor by a house painting and interior decorating firm and in the upper floor by a family as a dwelling, was burned early to-day, inflicting a loss of about $7,500 on building and contents.

The tenants were forced to run into the street in their night garb, several little children crying piteously from the cold and fright. They were cared for by neighbors.

POLICE FIND FIRST CHINESE VAGRANT

The first Chinese vagrant ever handled by the Boston police came up in Dorchester District Court to-day, when Toy Lott was charged with being a vagrant. Officer Jason Lindsey said that Toy Lott had been handling cases at the Fields Corner saloon, and that he arrested the Chinaman, who was without family dresses. Judge Churchill did not go into the question of Lott's citizenship, Commissioner Gallagher, and the case continued till to-morrow to get an interpreter.

THRONGS VISIT BIER OF REPUBLIC VICTIM

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 29.—The Church of the Sacred Heart was crowded to-day at the funeral of Miss Mary Boyle O'Reilly, who was one of the victims of the collision of the Roxbury and Glenville, Mass., for many years was in business in this city. The funeral procession left the house of Mr. Lincoln square, Dorchester, at 9:30 a. m. and proceeded to the church, where solemn requiem high mass was celebrated. Rev. Thomas Smith was celebrant of the mass, and other officers being the Rev. John F. Spellman, Rev. W. B. Fallon and Rev. D. T. Devine. The burial was in St. Michael's Cemetery.

CHENEY BODIES UNHONORED ON STEAMER PIER

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—The bodies of United States Consul Arthur S. Cheney and his wife, who were killed in Messina during the earthquake, were taken aboard from Hold No. 2 of the Italian Line steamship Venetia at the Atlantic docks, Brooklyn, to-day, with no representative of the Government, or any member of the family or personal friend present. Longshoremen carried the bodies down in the hermetically sealed caskets. They were lifted from the pier by the freight derrick. All the street entrance to the pier two black bears were provided.

It is also intended that American flags should be cast over the pine boxes when they were lifted on the pier, but even this was overlooked until the coffins were aboard ship.

An official of the Italian Line condemned the Brooklyn Navy Yard and asked whether the Government was not going to send some escort of honor for the dead. He was told that nothing was known of any such thing at the Navy Yard.

The Count Di Mosciglia, Italian consul-general, and Count Di Nino arrived too late to be present with wreaths to be placed on the coffins, but he, also, left at the pier.

Several Italians said that a number of Italian societies in New York were to meet the bodies at South Ferry and escort them to the Grand Central station, where they will be put aboard a special train for New Haven, Conn., the home of the Cheneys.

Several men and two Italian immigrants came with the Venetia, many of them being refugees from Calabria and Sicily.

DEFENDS LYNN PLAN TO SAVE HARBOR LAND

President R. S. Bosson of the Lynn Board of Trade at the annual meeting of the body last night defended the project to make Lynn a seaport and add taxable property valued at $10,000,000 to its resources. The plan is not favored by some members of the Board of Trade. In his speech he said:

"Our immediate duty as members only those citizens of Lynn who have faith in greater achievements than have been in the past. We look to the future prosperity and industrial and commercial supremacy of our city. We have no place for any citizens who may be associated with the Board of Trade, except members of who are members for want they can do no personal advancement in connection with the Board of Trade work; no other body could be more helpful to the citizens for any time, energy or initiative that they may possess.

"No project ever started in Lynn is of greater importance to the future welfare of our city than the development of Lynn harbor into a seaport and the reclaiming of hundreds of acres of what are now worthless flats. The addition of this tract of reclaimed land to the centre of our city would give a magnificent industrial district, now overcrowded, and the construction of a deep waterway through this reclaimed land, clear out to deep ocean, opens up and upholds the greatest opportunity for new industrial and commercial growth, as well as the greatest beauty spot that we must optimistic of us fail to appreciate."

CITY FIGHTS LIABILITY LAW

Before the legislative Committee on Judiciary to-day Arthur L. Spring, assistant corporation counsel for the city of Boston, opposed a bill presented by Representative Joseph Walsh of Lynn providing that the Commonwealth, counties, cities and towns shall be responsible to any person for damages caused by the negligence of their officers or servants. If the bill should pass, he said, it would be the first law in the world to make a public for damages caused by the negligence of officers or servants. If the bill should pass, he said, it would be the first law in the world to make a public for damages caused by the negligence of officers or servants. The doctrine that the public cannot be sued for damages caused by negligence of officers has been declared by the courts to be "public policy," and the Legislature, he said, by a vote of the council, members of Congress, notaries, school officers, firemen and city engineers.

FOUGHT MINE FIRE 30 HOURS

VIRGINIA CITY, Nev., Jan. 29.—After a fight of thirty hours, fire in the Sutro mine tunnel is under control. Although at first it was feared several miners perished it is now known all escaped, some meeting with minor injuries. The property loss will be heavy.

The Sutro tunnel, constructed by the late Adolph Sutro, once Mayor of San Francisco, with its laterals, is twelve miles in length, serving as a drainage for the various workings in the Comstock mines.

DISHONESTY IN HARVARD STUDY, SAYS CRIMSON

Harvard Crimson to-day declares that dishonesty in the class rooms in Harvard is prevalent. Crimson says that many of the undergraduates through thoughtlessness and laziness, rather than downright dishonesty, steal or borrow the work of others. It says that the practice is growing more and more common.

"Many undergraduates rely on others to do their work for them," says Crimson. "Reports and theses are often copied outright from those handed in in former years and many of these treatises appear year after year."

Declaring against class room dishonesty, Crimson says:

"It is with some trepidation that we approach the subject of dishonesty in class rooms, for we fear that the topic will be seized upon by the outside press as one more instance of the supposed general depravity of the Harvard undergraduate. Our attempts at reform have been noted so often that we are tempted to allow conditions to remain in their present status rather than expose our weaknesses to the critical gaze of the public. But 'murder will out,' and we feel that it is better to aim at improvement than pretend to be perfect.

Lean on Other Students.

"For some time past it has been apparent that many undergraduates rely on others to do their work for them, not only because they are not able to do it themselves, but because it is so easy to leave it to someone else.

"A certain amount of tutoring to explain difficulties is justifiable, but copying the work of another is decidedly not justifiable. Nevertheless the practice is growing more and more common. Reports and theses are often copied outright from those handed in in former years, and many of these treatises appear year after year in a course with absolute regularity. This is one of the most widespread methods for evading work, and amounts to nothing else than dishonesty.

"Another favorite way is to copy only a neighbor's paper in weekly conferences. In some courses most of the members either copy their papers directly from a book or from some studious person who has prepared the work. We do not attribute this cheating to innate depravity, but rather to thoughtlessness of the consequences and mere laziness.

Favors Honor System.

"But whatever the cause, there can be no justification for the act. Harvard undergraduates pride themselves on the fact that no honor system is necessary to prevent such occurrences, but appearances show that some such system is needed. The only way to obviate this penalty is for every man to do his own work or fail honestly."

HONOR M'KINLEY WITH CARNATION

Are you wearing a carnation to-day?

You should, for this is "Carnation" day.

It is the anniversary of the birth of William McKinley, the martyred President, who was born sixty-six years ago to-day in Niles, Ohio.

President McKinley died September 14, 1901, and the following year "Carnation" day was established by Lewis G. Heppeldo of Iowa. The Carnation League of America was organized to spread the idea. Every year see more people in all parts of the country honoring the assassin's victim by wearing the pink and white flowers which were the favorites of President McKinley.

President McKinley wore a carnation every day. Every photograph he has taken shows him with one.

To-day in Washington he was remembered by nearly everyone. President Roosevelt, the cabinet officers, Senators and Congressmen always wear a carnation in honor of the day.

Taste Is Sure Stomach Guide

A Barometer Which Never Fails, Though Seldom Believed.

"Taste is the direct guide to the stomach, and the taste buds are connected by the nerves with the stomach itself, so that they represent its health or disorder. If the stomach or its juices are out of tone, the blood is fermented by a change in the alkaline or acid conditions, and these reach the mouth both directly and indirectly.

"The taste buds are in the tongue, and are mounted by hairlike projections called papillae; they cover the surface of the tongue."

"When you taste these buds rise up and absorb the liquid; inform the nerves; the nerves tell the stomach, and the food is acceptable or not, just as the stomach feels."

The above remarks on taste come from an eminent authority and simply explain why when one smells cooking or sees food one thinks he can eat, but when he tastes he learns the stomach is out of business.

To the person who cannot taste aright, who relishes no food and simply forces himself to eat, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets hold the secret of enjoyable eating, perfect digestion and renewed general health.

Most men wait until their stomachs are completely sickened before they think seriously of assisting nature.

When your taste for food is lost it is a certain sign the stomach needs attention. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets cure such stomachs. They restore sweetness of breath, renew gastric juices, enrich the blood and give the stomach the strength and rest necessary to general duty.

Forty thousand physicians use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and every druggist carries them in stock; price 50c per box. Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package free by mail. Address, F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

WITNESSES DECLARE DYING PATIENTS WERE DRUGGED TO DEATH IN BURBANK HOSPITAL

Several questions were exacted of the executive committee by Mr. Walsh, such as the exclusion of all persons, except the members of the executive committee, before he would agree to have his client give her testimony. The committee yielded to his every request, putting aside all questions in Mr. Walsh's desire to obtain every bit of information that might be brought forth, taking issue with him in but one particular, and that was in respect to the taking of stenographic notes of the evidence. Upon motion from the notes of the stenographer, he said: "My first request is that the hearing be absolutely confined to the executive committee, this girl and myself (though I am entirely willing to eliminate myself if you desire) and that nobody else be present; no stenographic notes be taken or anything else."

Believing that the entire board of trustees and the public as well should know the facts fully and realizing that it would be impossible for the members of the board of trustees who might not be present at the hearing, and for the members of the executive committee to base a just finding on the evidence should they be compelled to depend upon their recollections and hearsay, the executive committee did not feel that it would be doing justice with themselves or the public, did they accede to Mr. Walsh's request respecting the exclusion of a stenographer, so they insisted that one be present and that a full report of the evidence be taken down verbatim.

This evidence will be presented to the trustees when the investigation is completed, or at any time any of them wish to examine it. The committee wishes it known also that any member of the board of trustees who may not be present at the hearings and will be most welcome, there being no purpose to exclude any member of the board, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. The executive committee has proceeded with the investigation in accordance with what it believed to be its duty, however unpleasant it might be, and has neither a partisan or a desire to exclude from the hearing any member of the board of trustees.

It is through a desire to assure the public mind that the committee is conducting a fair, impartial and thorough investigation into the complaint made against the hospital management and to dispel any unwarranted fears, that it has been aggravated by exaggeration and misrepresentation, that it was deemable to make this statement to the public. It is the desire of the committee to be put in possession of any evidence that will aid in making the investigation thorough, should present the same.

(Signed) M. FRED O'CONNELL,
Mayor.

H. K. BENNETT,
President of the Executive Council.
CHARLES E. WARE.
B. D. ARTHURS.
ALVAH CROCKER.

To Summon Eleven Nurses.

That the hospital officials intend to make most thorough and complete investigation into the charges made by Miss Margaret Cannon was learned this afternoon. Public feeling is so intense that the executive committee has determined to bring before it eleven nurses from the institution to give evidence.

The ten nurses, Miss Claire Lemay and Miss Caroline M. Miller, who were suspended by the executive committee late last midnight when the third night's inquiry had opened, refuse to make any comment as to the action taken. The committee made no charges against them, nor did it state why they were suspended.

That patients suffering from incurable maladies were actually given overdoses of morphine poison which hastened death; that other patients were driven to the habitual use of opiates in order to rid the attendants of their care; that a drug cabinet stood open where the attendants could secure laudanum, morphine and other drugs at one wound, at least, was drugged to death, and that the conduct of surgeons in the institution was not what it should be and that patients were habitually neglected, even being strapped to a chair when she was dying, are some of the inhuman and unjustifiable charges made against the conduct of Burbank Hospital.

The inquiry now being conducted by the committee was brought about by the charges made by Miss Margaret Cannon of Woburn, who, after she was dismissed from the institution, declared that she had seen patients carried out of the world by nurses who gave overdoses of morphine and other narcotics.

The executive committee, on the third day of the hospital, received a letter from Attorney David I. Walsh, attorney for Miss Cannon, withdrawing from further participation in the probe, declaring that he would be no party to a whitewash.

At 7 o'clock this morning Mayor M. Fred O'Connell, chairman of the Executive Committee, announced that he had adjourned the investigation until next week and that then the inquiry would be conducted publicly.

Three witnesses were heard last night by the committee, Dr. George Cate, and the two nurses, Misses Lemay and Miller, who were afterward announced to have been suspended.

Dr. Norton attended the Executive Committee when he declared that he had gone to the hospital at the request of Mrs. Alfred I. Cate to see her mother, who was a patient in the institution.

Dr. Norton said that Mrs. Cate's mother, whom he saw her, was suffering from an overdose of narcotics. He declared that he believed Mrs. Cate was right when she charged that her mother had been literally drugged to death.

To Hold Public Inquiry.

Dr. Norton declared to the committee that Mrs. Cate's mother had been neglected by her attendants.

His testimony and the testimony given by Miss LeMay and Miss Miller occupied the committee until 1 o'clock this morning.

All that the executive committee would give out concerning the doings of the nurses was that on the vote to do so was unanimous. No statement as to what the name of the action was was given out. It was announced that a public statement would be issued later.

It has just been learned that the testimony in support of her original charges which Miss Cannon gave before the executive committee at their meeting on Tuesday night was on the second night of the hearing almost entirely corroborated by three other nurses of the institution.

Mayor O'Connell, after the secret inquisition's third session was completed after midnight this morning, declared that before the inquiry was to be continued in public. He said that six or seven additional seventeen nurses at Burbank Hospital had been examined and that next week the remaining eleven would be asked to tell publicly about the conduct of the hospital.

Walsh Criticises Mayor.

Attorney David I. Walsh, who had been retained as counsel by Miss Cannon after her dismissal, last night after he had sent his letter to the executive committee refusing to further participate in the inquiry as it was conducted, said:

"I have written a letter to Mayor O'Connell withdrawing from any further connection with the Burbank Hospital investigation. I have withdrawn because I do not believe that Mayor O'Connell and the executive committee are really desirous to determine the exact situation of affairs at the institution.

"The Mayor's questions to witnesses, his statements to the press and his conduct clearly indicate to me that he does not intend to make anything more than a superficial investigation.

"He is angered and annoyed when evidence is produced showing an unsatisfactory condition at the institution. He had conducted the hearing, not in the nature of a probe, but seemed to think that the superficial end of the investigation was to determine if Miss Cannon was dismissed for good cause.

"I have insisted that Miss Cannon's dismissal was a minor detail, as we are not to longer waste any time and energy in a fruitless effort to convince the committee that it is not conducting a real investigation.

"I preferred to allow the executive committee to assume the complete responsibility for the investigation and concluded that I would no longer be a party to a whitewashing proceeding."

Mayor O'Connell assured the committee last night when he admitted that the story told by Miss Cannon to him was the first that she had first approached him and told him her charges against the conduct of Burbank Hospital, was true.

Mrs. Cate, one of the most prominent women in this city, was confronted with the investigators for an hour and a half.

She said her daughter was drugged to death in Burbank Hospital. When she left the hospital she said:

"I testified to night about how I was unable to get into the room of my mother when she was gasping for breath and dying.

"I told of how she was tied to a chair when she was dying; that there had been no change in clothing on the bed clothing which was filthy; that she had been kept continually under the influence of morphine, although I had requested that this drug should not be administered.

Says Money Was Taken.

"I told the committee that I sincerely believe my mother would be living if she had not gone to Burbank Hospital.

"I told the committee that I know mother was left in a closed room alone and unattended. She was in the hospital eighteen days suffering from a bed sore, and that I believe the death certificate gave cause of debility as the cause of death, though my mother was not troubled with anything but a bed sore.

"Every time I went to the hospital I found my mother under the influence of a drug which I knew to be morphine.

"I then told of a package of my mother's money being missing at the time of her death.

"The day that my mother died I telephoned from the hospital that she was dying and asked as to my mother's condition, and each time I was told that she was resting comfortably.

"Inspired by a strange presentiment, I telephoned to the doctor, who had charge of her case in the hospital, and complained of the treatment my mother was receiving.

"One minute after talking with the doctor and five minutes after my last talk with the hospital I was notified by telephone from the hospital that my mother was dying, and that if I wished to see her alive I should rush there at once.

"When I arrived at Burbank Hospital I found my mother in a closed room, left to die unattended.

"I stayed with her two hours, until she died, and no nurse or attendant ever came near the room.

"So long as there will be dope in the cabinet everything will be all right for me."

That he found the body of his wife in the same condition at the same time that is the allegation made by Albert T. Lamson, No. 37 Cedar street, who is ready to testify. He says:

"Found Wife's Body in Barn.

"I was summoned to go to the hospital and arrange for my wife's funeral and take the body. I was deeply grieved by learning of the death of my wife, but it did not affect me half as bad as where I found my wife. Her body was really in the barn, as my horse was used and where rats were running around."

Lamson, who has been called by Walsh & Walsh to appear in the investigation declares that her mother was murdered at the hospital by being drugged to death.

Miss Lamson, who is a pretty girl of twenty-one, was discharged from the institution, she asserts, without good reason. She was learning to be a trained nurse. When she was told her services were no longer required, shocked at what she declares she saw in the hospital, she went to the legal firm of Walsh & Walsh and retained their services.

"Publicity Cure," Says Ex-Mayor.

Former Mayor Charles A. Rabbitt, who is following the case closely, said to-day:

"Publicity is the cure for the situation, and the people are demanding it. I am glad the executive committee has determined to hold its meetings in public. At first it appeared as if the purpose of the committee was to hear testimony as to negligence, and then afterward to investigate the charges.

"It is a fact and cannot well be disputed that the matter is growing worse and worse and the attempted secrecy of the investigation but added to the injury. There never was a better opportunity for a general cleaning out of the great institution now run by a private corporation. The executive committee, though I do not believe it has any legal right to be handling a matter so great as this, must make a thorough cleanup of the case. The people demand it.

"The City Council has a right to take the matter up and petition for special legislation to abolish the board of trustees and to have the hospital run properly.

"In the first place, the fee board of trustees should be making the investigation. When I was chairman of the executive committee I never let it out, and had the authority that the present committee seems to think it has.

"For a long time matters have been serious, and now is the time for the public to see to it that something results from the charges which are to be made against the conduct of the hospital, and, I understand, will be made. I opposed the building of the hospital on the grounds that it would be a burden to the city in that it would cost considerable to maintain it. I predicted a heavy expenditure, and my predictions came true. Up to this year $15,000 has been appropriated to run the institution."

"City Councilman Fixed."

"I noticed that anything public is not settled until it is fixed politically," continued the ex-Mayor. "Eliminating the $15,000 appropriation this year, and running the hospital on the interest from the fund, which reverted to the trustees by reason of a recent Supreme Court decision, I predict the interest can't and won't run the hospital.

"How it happened that the legislation creating the board of trustees got through the Legislature I know, because I followed it closely. There was one man in the City Council who opposed the act. The people were fooled, and this man was fixed by being placed on the board of trustees.

"The matter will not be settled right until the people get its own. It is folly to assume that Mr. Burbank ever intended that the hospital should be a city hospital.

Lawyer Walsh Scores Board.

Lawyer David I. Walsh, in his letter to Mayor O'Connell withdrawing from the case, says:

Fitchburg, Jan. 28, 1909.

Mayor M. Fred O'Connell, chairman of the executive committee of Burbank Hospital Trustees, Fitchburg:

Dear Sir—I write to inform you that I no longer intend to appear before your committee in the matter of investigating the condition of affairs at the Burbank Hospital.

My reason for withdrawal at this time is because you are attempting my motives during this investigation. This fact, together with other information that has come to me from day to day, has led me to believe that you have no sympathy with the inquiry, that you have repeatedly made statements after evidence, given by nurses at the hospital, that the evidence had proved nothing, and from the tone and manner of your inquiry at the hearing, I have been certain from the beginning that you did not intend to probe and investigate into the true condition of affairs at the Burbank Hospital.

You have gone one step too far when you attempt to prejudge or decide the issue involved. You cannot shirk your duty to the public in facing startling facts presented to you of conditions existing at Burbank Hospital by indifferently attacking my motive or the motives of the people who have aided or assisted in this investigation.

You may take whatever position you desire in the matter, but I for one, want to say that there has been nothing in my career that I point to with more pride than the presenting of evidence without one cent of reward to myself in the cause of a nineteen-year-old girl, who was forced to resign from the Burbank Hospital, and whose story of the conditions that she found there has been substantiated by numerous nurses whom you have seen and heard and know to have told the truth even at the risk of your enmity and other officials.

It was enough for me to know your position in this matter when a certain nurse in the hospital was giving damaging testimony against conditions at the hospital, but whispered to one of the trustees next to you some remark questioning her motive and intimating that her veracity should be questioned because of her association with a professional man in this city, who differed with you politically.

You have also given to the press a statement to the effect that I was responsible for no evidence being made public by the committee. You know that to be false.

Fear Public Inquiry.

You will recall that at the second meeting my opinion was asked about the making of the evidence public and I suggested that you, the Mayor, be authorized to give the press an abstract or summary of the evidence. This you declined. Then the trustees voted unanimously to keep the matter private, notwithstanding the fact that I said to them that the responsibility of making the evidence private would be placed by the public upon them and not upon you or me.

Knowing how you feel personally in this matter, I know that the other members of the committee at least will do me the justice of appreciating how no amount of courage could induce me to continue spending my time and energy in investigating the conditions at the Burbank Hospital, when I know you were determined at the outset that it would never be successful, and that your reason for it not being successful was because, regardless of facts proved, you did not believe the charges brought were responsible for starting it.

I plead guilty of placing you in a position where you are called upon to show moral courage and ways of the future your record will not be so smooth and commendable as if no investigation was being carried on.

Call Conditions Immoral.

Condemn me as you will and my motive, but the people will place upon you full responsibility for continuing the immoral, unclean and inhuman condition of affairs at the Burbank Hospital.

Go on with your probing, but let the public know not only the answers that you get, but the questions that are framed, and I will leave it to them to judge how desirous you are of finding out conditions.

I also request that you give to the public all the evidence now before your committee, and the part that I have suits your "whitewashing" purposes.

I do not wish to misjudge your motives, but it is my full belief that you never intended anything to develop out of this investigation, except to have the story of the nineteen-year-old nurse and then push it aside as being the story of a disgruntled and disappointed girl. This some that has come to you from the lips of nurses now in the hospital who are offended your sensitive ears that you consider the better method of relieving yourself of the responsibility in the matter is to effectively attack them.

The prophecy that two nurses would be discharged is verified, information that you, at least, have prejudged the evidence you have got.

DAVID I. WALSH.

RITCHIE NAMED AS MISSIONARY TO SAVE TREES

The directors of the Boston Merchants' Association have voted to send Everson Ritchie, executive director of the association, to Washington, to confer with Congressman Weeks and others in reference to the forest reserve bill which the House Committee on Agriculture has reported favorably.

The association is receiving encouraging letters from representative business organizations throughout New England. These letters indicate that interest in the preservation of the forests on the high watersheds of the White Mountains is widespread among business men, and that the importance of legislation is fully realized.

HATFIELD BOOMED AS MAYOR OF NEWTON

Newton Republicans are to-day booming the name of Charles E. Hatfield for Mayor of that city. The ball was set rolling at a dinner given in his honor at Young's Hotel last night in recognition of his management of Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham's campaign last Fall and his twenty years' service as chairman of the Republican City Committee of Newton. Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Hatfield, and attributed much of his success in the last campaign to Mr. Hatfield's ability.

TRY THIS FOR COLDS

Mix half ounce of Concentrated pine compound with 2 ounces of glycerine and a half pint of good whiskey; shake it well each time and use in doses of a tablespoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours.

Concentrated pine compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it as well as the other ingredients, can be had from any good druggist.

This is said to be the quickest cough and cold cure known to science, and at the same time it has a splendid tonic effect which benefits the whole system. The Concentrated pine is a special pine product refined for medical use and comes only in half ounce bottles, each enclosed in a tin screw-top case, which is air-tight, to retain all the original strength of the fluid, but be sure it is labeled "Concentrated."

MARY GARDEN'S DARING SALOME MAKES SOCIETY GASP IN AMAZEMENT

HER INTERPRETATION OF WILDE DRAMA SURPASSES ALL PREVIOUS ATTEMPTS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—"Salome" is a storm bird.

For the second time within two years the most sensational lyric work of recent years has been presented in an American opera house.

And for the second time, even before its noble performance, it has raised riots.

It was interpreted, last night, after many weeks of rehearsal, at the Manhattan. The impression it produced there, as at the Metropolitan two years ago, was vivid and profound.

Many in the immense audience present were startled by some of the episodes and some of the acting.

The audience was the most ultra-fashionable in existence and the largest in numbers ever gathered at the Manhattan. Even standing room was all taken. As the regular prices were $10 a seat and boxes $50 to $100 each, more than $20,000 were paid to see Mary Garden's first appearance as Salome.

I.—The Spectacle

From the first appearance of Mary Garden upon the stage, a few moments after the curtain rose, the attention of the house was centred upon the curious, "unmoral" child-woman created by the decadent poet, Wilde.

In costume Miss Garden showed a new "Salome." The jeweled bodice, headdress and waist supported upon a wire way to a one-piece spangled and diaphanous garment, draped from the bust and hanging sheer almost to the ankles.

Her bolt, of a light red shade, and cut square off at the neck, was unadorned. Her dress resembled that of the pictured costume of the Egyptians or Assyrians of the period of the opera.

Directly that Jokinaan was released from the old cistern, Miss Garden plunged into the striking action of the drama, and to the accompaniment of the distracting music of the score, worked gradually up to the racking climax which tested the over-wrought nerves of the strongest in the house.

Salome sinuous, appealing and insistent, wooed the immovable and tragic figure of the prophet. For more than ten minutes, while the audience wondered, she prayed about this stony figure, as snake-like wooing an oak, and finally fell to the ground, a squirming, unashamed victim of her own passions, under the curses of the unmoved object of her incomprehensible passions.

Her body, at close to that of Nirzinski, captain of the guard, was had fallen upon the sword and killed himself for love of her when he witnessed her vain attempt to win the love of the prophet. In her progress of the passion she had not noticed the suicide of Nirzinski who had stood silent at her side and even observed his body with her foot while making her appeal to Jokinaan.

Prepares for the Dance.

Unnoticed, she continued to torture her mind and body seated on a bench, while Herod, her mother, Herodias, and the most brilliant court appeared upon the terrace, the Terrace is to search for his wayward daughter, with whom he was madly in love.

Then came the dance of the Seven Veils, the second great scene of the opera. Miss Garden elected to do this dance herself, and if sensational acme is sought, she made no mistake. After Herod had sworn to grant any request she might make, Salome prepared for the dance.

Two slaves approached and removed her slippers and spangled outer garments, and she stood before Herod, and the audience, with but a short, clinging and quite diaphanous garment. Underneath she wore white tights, but for the insignificant bit of stage this fact could only be guessed by the audience.

Draped in veils, she was a strange figure as she posed during the first few bars of the whining Eastern music which Strauss wrote for the dance. Then, with startling poses, she ran from the stage, and from a tetrarch, on his throne chair, failed to conceal his strong emotions.

Discards First Veil.

The first veil was discarded and the poses became more daring. There was no dance in the accepted sense. The music told the story of the poses. Two more veils were thrown off, and Herod, snatching up one, kissed it passionately while Salome lit in the bosom of his garments.

Faster and faster Salome moved about the stage, while the drums took up the wild beat, and another veil was cast aside. Every pose of the body appeared distinct as though the entire draperies had been discarded. It was more daring than if the dancer had not been worn.

At last, exhausted, the dancer threw herself at the feet of the stage of the prophet. It was the final and startling pose of the dance, and an audible sigh was heard throughout the house when Herod started forward.

Goes Through Dramatic Scene.

In the costume in which she had finished the dance, Miss Garden went through the dramatic scene with Herod, in which she commands the head of the prophet, and with her wish granted gets around the outer garment and slippers.

When the headsman descended into the cistern to execute her demand for the head of the prophet, Salome, again serpent-like, threw form if fat upon her face on top of the cistern and by the writhings of her body enacted the tragedy hidden from the audience. The guttural groans of the executioner made the thing even more hideous.

Then great black arms passed the face severed head up from the cistern to the waiting arms of Salome. Then the final and startling scene was drawn out to the blackest shading of the horrible passion of Salome. Kissing the dead lips, she embraced it; she approached it, and then in horror drew away.

Audience Closes Eyes.

The faces of those upon the stage were hidden from the sight, and fans became useful. Others closed their eyes and the house was dark.

Then, with a shudder, Herod arose in his face of such a tormenting spectacle. The stage was cleared from the sight, and when finally Herod appeared and saw Salome under the light of the moon, she slowly rises in one, kissing and caressing the head, and ordered the soldiers to slay her, the audience was glad when the curtains fell on the scene eight and the final wave of Camponini's baton put an end to the whole scene.

II.—The Story

BY CHARLES HENRY MELTZER.

In music, nothing is deliberately moral or immoral—unmoral. In music it may be both, either intentionally or without intention.

Music-drama, which combines both forms of art, has rarely offended vicious

Mary Garden as Salome, painted by Ben Ali Haggin.

Wicked in design or plot as plays may be, since they are set to music, to great music, they are strangely purified.

That is, at all events, the rule. And so the closeted may enter the lair of Tristan and Isolde on the stage, in the Wagnerian music-drama, and live on, without injury to their souls, while Siegmund woos Sie-linde.

But there are exceptions to all rules. By some, among them persons of high intelligence like Miss Morgan—who is said to have instigated the withdrawal of the word of the Metropolitan—"Salome" seems to be regarded as one of them.

The music drama or tone-poem (for it is largely a descriptive work, of Richard Strauss was created under the inspiration of a notorious play by Oscar Wilde.

The play, as I have cause to know, was meant to be perverse. Many years ago, when it was read to Sarah Bernhardt, I heard Wilde say it was so to that great actress.

"My only object in writing it was to make something curious and sensual," said he when Bernhardt had complimented him on his achievement. He spoke in French. So did the artists who interpreted the music last night—most of them.

"Curious and sensual."

Doesn't Fit Hammerstein.

That hardly fits Mr. Hammerstein's theory. Mr. Hammerstein has had the courage to suggest that "Salome is neither moral nor immoral—she is unmoral," and that "her love, once awakened, as it has been by the vision of the Prophet, is as real, as honest as the love that might be awakened in the heart of a vestal virgin."

Mr. Hammerstein will excuse me if I smile.

Translate "curious and sensual" into plain English and we have "vicious."

"Salome," the play, and as we all know, the deliberately planned effort of a disgruntled poet to avenge a series of baneful, but perverse images.

To attain his end the author did not scruple to distort Scripture or to improve on history. And this regardless of the fact that the tone of the Gospels is the "daughter of Herodias" referred to by name. She is suggested, rather than described, as a pretty but impurely negative creature, acted upon and dominated by Herodias—rather a puppet indeed, than a subject of evil, scarcely more than a mere tool in the hands of the evil one.

Wilde, however, twisted her into a precocious monster, beautiful to the eye, but to soul as foul as Herodias herself. He made her even more abominably and strangely evil than her mother and step-father. Although young and perhaps raw years, nothing in the imaginary part of Salome is still confined to rank with the sexual and is irregularly developed and sensual. She has anticipated the depravity of "The Divine Marquis." Mr. de Lara, the eternally infamous.

The striking contrast to Salome stands the pure, pure character of the Prophet, Jokanaan, representing the advent of the Lord and crying aloud for repentance upon Herodias, the new Jezebel.

Between the embodiments of good and ill, of purity and depravity stands Herod. A degenerate, yet not wholly without good intentions, and, till the very end, anxious rather to help John or Jokanaan than harm him.

The rest in the play, as in the music-drama, are minor characters used to suggest a corrupt environment and to give color to the tragedy.

REBELS ROUT ARMY OF SHAH

TEHERAN, Jan. 29.—Three Persian generals in command of infantry and artillery forces sent against Ossiem and Karganerout, where revolution has broken out, have been decisively beaten according to messengers that reached here to-day.

The rest of the Shah's forces was so complete that the generals abandoned the soldiers and fled precipitately.

The revolutionists were aided by a detachment from Satar Khan's revolutionary army at Tabriz.

The revolt at Ossiem and Karganerud was the direct result of the uprising at Ispahan led by Sowais Khan, where an independent government has been established. The fear of the royalists is said to have involved great loss of life.

WHISK Y FOR LAME EACK

The increased use of whiskey for lame back and rheumatisms is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. The following is the formula:

To one-half pint of good whiskey add one ounce of Toris compound and one ounce syrup Sarsaparilla compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring.

Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it as well as the other ingredients can be had from any good druggist.

It is surely worth trying by anyone who may be afflicted.

Dramatic Scene in Tremont Temple as Famous Evangelist Urges Spell-Bound Hundreds to Turn to Christ

syllable written, or the least hint given, of any amount to be paid to any one of the workers in this campaign.

"The compensation of the workers lies entirely with the people. On the last three nights of the revival there will be an offering—that goes to the workers. That is what they get—and that is all.

"Power of God on City."

"I want to add this: This is a glorious work capsuloso and I know that the power of God is on this city. I know it. A thousand people were turned away to-day and they wanted an overflow meeting. I hope that we may arrange it next week."

Turning to Dr. Chapman, Dr. Conrad said:

"Dr. Chapman, you will not have to pay any deficit in Boston. I want to tell you that Boston does not call men here to do a work like you and your associates are doing and then call upon them to pay a deficit."

Then Dr. Conrad in a great burst of earnestness and eloquence, facing the great audience, declared:

"I don't know a single man in the whole world into whose hands I would rather pour all of the money I have in the world, than Dr. Chapman. It is safe there."

Another feature of the meeting to-day was the singing of a volunteer woman in the gallery and the singing of Albert E. Smith, a son of Mr. Charles Fitzgerald, "Gypsy" Smith.

Here are three stanzas of the gospel hymn that Mr. Smith sang:

My mother's hand is on my brow,
Her gentle voice is pleading now;
Across the years so sacred by sin,
What memories of love come trooping in!

While others scorned me in their pride,
She gently drew me to her side;
When all the world had turned away,
My mother stood by me that day.

Oh, mother, I think of thee,
'Tis but a step to Calvary.
Thy gentle hand upon my brow
Is leading me to Jesus now.

Woman in Gallery Sings.

"Now I want a woman in the gallery to sing," announced Mr. Alexander. "I want some one to sing a verse of No. 20—'Don't Stop Praying.'"

There was no immediate response. Many eyes were turned on the gallery. Then a woman arose and in a marvelously sweet and cultured voice sang a verse of the gospel song.

"Now," said Mr. Alexander, "I don't know that man But I like that man that is a Christian. I can tell by the way he sings."

"Did you ever hear of Gypsy Smith?" asked Mr. Alexander.

There was applause.

"He's not here," announced the director of music, "but his son is. I want him to sing No. 27. He will sing it as it has been sung."

A DORCHESTER WOMAN'S ADVICE

If Followed by Other Bay State Women Will Save Much Suffering.

Bright eyes, rosy cheeks, an elastic step and a good appetite should be the birthright of every American girl. Pale, sallow, languid girls and women have either inherited ill health or have disregarded some rule of right living. But Nature is constantly striving to restore the natural, healthful condition and, with proper aid, will do so in most cases. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic especially adapted for girls and women of all ages and give just the aid required to bring back health and strength to the nervous and exhausted.

Mrs. Jeremiah O'Connor, of No. 16 Erie street, Dorchester, Mass., failed to get relief from her weakness until she tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every woman, who is similarly afflicted, is needlessly suffering as Mrs. O'Connor's statement of her case shows.

"I suffered from weakness for six months," she says, "and the doctors said I must have this debilitated condition I was in. I had severe headaches, had no appetite and became very thin and wasted. I was hardly able to walk around and could not attend to my housework properly. My appetite was poor and I was constipated.

"I did not seem to get any better with the doctor's treatment and decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I felt better after taking a few boxes and used them until completely restored to health. I am a strong, healthy woman and feel it my duty to recommend the pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic for the blood and nerves and have proved especially helpful to women and growing girls. They were used extensively in private medical practice and, proving efficient in a wide range of diseases and absolutely safe in all cases, were placed upon general sale with directions for use prepared by the doctor himself. Their merit has made them the most widely used family medicine in the world today.

A helpful book, "Plain Talks to Women," will be sent to any address upon request in a plain, sealed envelope.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents a box; six boxes, for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Stops Divorce Proceedings

One day a friend came to see me in my office and he was very much agitated. He declared that he was driven to a decree from his wife and that he is constantly grumbling," he said, "and is nervous and despondent. Mr. Hill, in an emphatic way, told him that I was glad he came to me. Your wife is suffering with a stomach ailment, and she is in need of my remedy. Thereupon I gave him a treatment of Dr. Burkhart's Vegetable compound. Soon all the trouble disappeared, as it has in hundreds of thousands of just such cases. If you are afflicted in the same manner all I have to say, go at once to your druggist and get a 50 days' treatment of Dr. Burkhart's Vegetable Compound, 25c. It will cure you of that gloomy, despondent mood in you. Dr. Burkhart's Vegetable Compound is a positive remedy for all ailments of the female system. Your stomach should be held accountable for very conditions. Dr. W. S. Burkhart, Station H, Jamaica Plain.

Here are the three sweet singers of the great revival and four of their soul-stirring songs. At the left of the picture is Robert Harkness, the Australian accompanist and singer; in the middle is Charles M. Alexander, the musical director, and at the right is E. W. Nafzer, the tenor soloist.

sung itself into his seats.

No. 27 is entitled, "Memories of Mother."

"He Will Hold Me Fast."

The crowd was so large at 11:30 that Mr. Alexander began the singing. He got up on the platform and started the service. He began it with "He Will Hold Me Fast."

It is safe to say that never people in Greater Boston are singing this simple, gospel song than every before have thousands of voices been blended, whistling or voices, melody simultaneously.

"Now, I want you girls over there to sing," announced Mr. Alexander.

The girls sang.

"That was very sweet, but very weak," said Mr. Alexander. "Now I want you to sing—sing—sing."

"Now, let Mr. Fisher sing."

Mr. Fisher, now soloist, arose and sang:

"He will hold me fast,
He will hold me fast,
For my Savior pledged me so,
He will hold me fast."

"Now," said Mr. Alexander, "you have heard it. Sing it."

A moment later a woman arose in the gallery and sang it—sweetly, beautifully, effectively.

Sing Famous Old Melodies.

From one song to another—good, old, moving melodies—Mr. Alexander swung.

"Anybody here led to Christ by a hymn?"

"Just As I Am," a voice cried.

"Were received in the heart that hymn?" asked Mr. Alexander a little bit sharply.

There was a little hesitation. Then:

"Yes, I was."

Then they sang the old hymn.

"Anybody here brought to Christ by a song?"

"Yes," came a voice. "Jesus paid it all."

This was sung.

"I want to know," said Mr. Alexander, "if there is a woman in this audience who was converted by a hymn."

There was no immediate response. It was quite timidity. Then came a voice:

"I have a Savior, He's pleading in glory."

That was sung—one of the most beautiful features of the meeting—the singing by the women in the gallery.

Touches Hearts by Story.

The eloquence of Dr. Chapman to-day was surpassing.

Not since his arrival in Boston has been heard from his lips such a fervent, so touching an appeal as that which he delivered to-day.

He told at the end of his sermon the story which twanged the heartstrings of everyone present. It was about an Indianapolis millionaire who had a daughter born deaf and dumb. He was going to Europe for a year, and he did not know what to do with the little afflicted child.

A friend suggested that he put her in an institution which cared for cases of her kind. He had never thought of this, but he followed his friend's advice.

At the end of his long journey the father returned and called at the home to see his child.

"She had been told of his coming return," said Dr. Chapman, "by the kind people who had charge of her. She met only with her fingers, but with her lips, and she was watching at the window for his coming. To the long winding driveway came the carriage which brought her father. The little girl dashed out of the door, down the steps and leaped into her father's arms.

"He held her out for a moment at arm's length, and then he clasped her to his bosom, and she pressed her lips to his and whispered in his ear, 'I love you, papa.'

"That great, strong man was dumbfounded. He held her out and looked at her again. And then he swooned. They carried him inside and for him all that afternoon to recover from the shock that he had received when he heard that dumb child utter those loving words."

Tears Greet Recital.

All over the vast audience were heard the outward signs of emotion. Certainly there was not a father or mother present but they wept. On the platform spotless white handkerchiefs were wiping tears that deluged with tears—the faces of young men and aged men—evangelists who had heard the same story told before, gospel singers, clergymen of Boston. And in the audience it was the same everywhere.

Mr. Chapman, in speaking, announced the schedule of meetings for the week and also said that a representative of all the newspapers in the city would be out in the vestibule at the close of the meeting to receive subscriptions for the dailies, that all who wished might send them to their friends.

"It is the very least we can do," he cried, "to show our appreciation of the wonderful work the press of Boston is doing in all our great cause, and at the same time it will advance the work of leading souls to Christ.

Spread Good by Newspapers.

"Why, I had a letter since I came here from a friend way up in Canada. He is a lumber. He said he had just received a bundle of Richmond papers telling of my work there. He said that it had inspired him to start a revival in his own town.

"You see the influence of the press in this simple story. You can do your part, too. I spoke about this yesterday, and I will send two to Panama, relief to the very cruelest Hoo-Hoo doing on the platforms.

"And I sent five to England," shouted Mr. Alexander.

And then from all parts of the Temple there arose a shout that proved that the newspapers to California and to Sweden and Italy, Virginia, Oregon, Porto Rico, Philadelphia, New Zealand and Newfoundland lit under.

"So don't backslide. There are boys down at the entrance who will sell you the Boston papers already wrapped up for mailing, at the same price. Get them at bargain prices and send them out."

The speaker asked all present to repeat the words of St. John, iii, 3:

"For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten sont that whosoever believeth in Him shall not perish, but have everlasting life."

"No Man Cared for My Soul."

"My text today," Dr. Chapman said, "is one which should be spoken in a manner key.

Psalms, cxlii, 4: 'I looked on my right hand, and beheld, but there was no man that would know me; refuge failed me; no man cared for my soul.'

"Can you hear the wail, the plaint, of this sad text?

"There has never been a man in whose life there has been more sorrow as the result who notice out the text, and who said: 'For no man cared for my soul.'

"But I am a saved man, and my plea is for the man who lives in Boston to-day and who needs repentance and salvation; for the business man whose partner is a Christian and though he is not; for the boy who has wandered from the paths of rightousness yet who sees his mother's pitiful, tear-stained face imploring him to come back to Christ.

"My plea is to every man who has drifted away from Jesus Christ and who thinks he is following the true path, but isn't, and there are hundreds and thousands of them.

Dashed to Death in Fire.

"I cannot understand how a man can be indifferent to the teachings of Christ. I was conducting services in Detroit and a fire alarm was heard. A large office building was in flames, and away up in the tenth floor were five men hemmed in and cut off by the flames. They rushed to the windows, and hung out on the stone coping. Somehow the apparatus of the firemen reached the scene, and the ladder men began mounting up and stepping their hands. Their strength finally became exhausted, and they dropped off, one by one. Down, down they went to the cruel stone pavement below and were dashed to their death.

"In the evening at the service the chairman said: 'I don't believe there are five men in this city where wives and children are waiting for them who will never come home. Today they went out from those homes happy and believing that they would come back this evening. You never know when you will face the great hereafter. It is time that you gave yourselves to Christ, if you haven't already. And men and women and women all over the big audience had their handkerchiefs to their eyes.

"The average man who attends a revival service never considers the possibility of his being lost. I talked with a man in Philadelphia I talked with a distinguished newspaper man—some one of name, were I privileged to speak it, so would all recognize—I asked him not to join my church, but to become a Christian.

"He went and looked out of his office on to Chestnut street and his eyes became moist. Then he turned about and said to me: 'I thank you, Dr. Chapman. None but my mother ever spoke to me in this way before.' And that man turned to God.

5,000 Could Be Won.

"I hold that there are 5,000 men in Boston to-day who could be won to Christ if we were true to our obligations, and souls then out, and I'll guarantee that one of them is saying to-day: 'No man cares for my soul!'

"I said to one of my church officers one day: 'How many souls have you won to Christ?' 'I am afraid none,' he replied with feeling. That man was a merchant and a banker and an officer of the Fourth Presbyterian Church. One of the biggest depositors in his bank was a man known as a 'no believing'—you would all know some if I mentioned it——

"Well, one day after the banker had died up the day's business with this old gambler, he said to him: 'My dear friend, did you know that I was a Christian? Do you know that I was a vestryman of the Fourth Presbyterian Church——

"Yes, I had, replied the man. 'And has you noticed that very time I came into your bank I used to sit down and watch you and wait for you to speak to me about this very subject. You never did.'

"Now that man died by his own hand. An divorce until that day had any man approached him and urged him to be a Christian. He might have been saved.

"There are 10,000 like him in Boston to-day. Shall you wait until they all cry out 'No man cares for my soul'?

EVANGELISTS WILL OBSERVE WEDNESDAY AS FLOWER DAY

Flower day will be observed on Wednesday in the evangelical campaign. Flowers of any color or variety will be received. The plan is to have the people send flowers on Tuesday afternoon or Tuesday night to the different group central churches. They will be gathered and sent to the people in the hospitals, to people sick at home and to all shut-ins, with the greetings of the united churches of Boston.

The committee in charge is: Theodore A. Hildreth, chairman; William A. Bennett, Allen C. Emery and Clarence W. Williams.

There will be a committee in each group of denominations and the students of the New England Deaconesses' Association will assist. The committee requests the names of sick persons and of shut-ins.

Sunday afternoon services for men, for women and for young men will be conducted by the Simultaneous Evangelistic Campaign Committee. Dr. Chapman will preach to men in Tremont Temple at 3 o'clock. The service will be for men exclusively. Sunday Dr. Chapman will have a service at 10:30 a. m. in Tremont Temple, and another in the evening, also at Tremont Temple. The Sunday afternoon subject will be 'A Terrible Whirlwind.'

Mrs. Asher, wife of Rev. William Asher, the saloon evangelist, will talk to women at the Park Street Church at 3 o'clock Thursday, and Ford C. Ottman will talk to young men at the Boston Y. M. C. A. on Sunday at 3 p. m.

Other Sunday afternoon services are announced as follows:

For men only—In Stoughton Street Baptist Church, by Rev. Ralph Atkinson.

General—At First Presbyterian Church, Columbus avenue, South End, by Rev. H. A. Sheldon.

General—At Ebenezer Will Baptist Church, Roxbury, by Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, Ph. D.

REVIVALISTS PLAN MIDNIGHT MEETING IN HEART OF BOSTON

Midnight revival meetings are being planned by the simultaneous evangelistic campaign committee, and at least one big meeting late at night will be held. The idea is to have Dr. Chapman and Charles M. Alexander, his chief of staff, hold a big meeting in one of the theatres next week.

Dr. Chapman will not take definite steps until he is assured that such a service will be desirable. Rev. Daniel S. Toy will preach at Faneuil Hall Market on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week and Rev. Ora Gray will direct the services on Thursday and Friday. Frank Lenwood will direct the services the first three days, and Charles F. Allen on the other two days. The choir will be made up of the other directors, singers and organists.

Saturday will be a day of quiet and rest. There will be no meetings.

To-night the services in Tremont Temple will open at 7:30. Dr. Chapman will preach, and Charles M. Alexander will direct the music. Robert Harkness will preside at the piano, and Ernest F. Nafzger will be the soloist

WOMAN ACCUSES BROTHER AS SLAYER

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Jan. 29.—Recovering from a state of coma into which she sank last Sunday, when her husband was killed and she herself was beaten by robbers in their home at Hopewell Junction, Mrs. John Kliff to-day accused her brother, Theodore Adams, of the crime as he stood by her bedside. She declared that Adams struck the blow, and said that she had seen him reaching for the money under her pillow. Adams was arrested.

SEVERE ITCHING HUMOR ON HANDS

Tiny Pustules Spread Up to Elbows —Could Not Sleep and Scratched Until She Bled—After Seven Months of Futile Treatment, Little Girl was Completely

CURED IN TWO WEEKS BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"My daughter, twelve years of age, was afflicted with a terrible itching of the hands which was so bad at night that she was unable to sleep. She scratched herself until she bled. The trouble began in the shape of small pustules about the size of a pinhead which produced severe itching and then a hard scab formed on top. These always opened up again, bleeding badly. From the fingers it extended over the hand and as far as the elbows. The doctor said it was eczema and that recovery would necessarily be slow. He treated my daughter for seven months, but the trouble always grew worse. Then I started in to use Cuticura Remedies. After I had used Cuticura Soap for two weeks, with Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, her hands were well." Mrs. M. Strecker, South Haven, Minn., April 1 and July 7, 1908."

ARCHBISHOP LAUDS WORK OF WOMEN

The women of the Boston Archdiocese were praised and thanked by Archbishop O'Connell for their work in making a great success of the recent Bazar of Nations held in Mechanics Building, at a complimentary reception and tea tendered the women by the Archbishop at the Hotel Somerset yesterday. The Archbishop said:

"I am glad to meet this great army of workers and glad to have this opportunity to thank you personally for the zeal which characterized your efforts. Financially speaking, the bazar was a grand success, and this is due to your great activity, your sacrifices and your zeal. But better far, and even more gratifying, is the knowledge that your magnificent work has been an exhibition of a demonstration of unity, of Christian charity.

"Hitherto all the charities have been isolated, but the Bazar of Nations brought you together; Lawrence, Salem and other places joined in the good work, and you belong to one large Catholic family. You are working for one common cause, and God will bless you for this outpouring of Christian zeal.

"The amount of money realized through your activity and co-operation is really wonderful, considering that the time at which it was held was not of the best, but far greater than that was the Catholic spirit shown and the endeavors of every one to make it a success. You made many sacrifices, but you will be rewarded, for your names are written in letters of gold when you work for the cause of God, for the cause of religion."

CONNOLLY IS PRAISED BY LINER'S CREW

Forty-seven members of the Republic's crew and forty-nine passengers arrived in Boston from New York to-day, and will sail early to-morrow morning on the Romanic. Two Italian surgeons were in charge of the passengers, while the entire party was offloaded by Ettore Ciampolini of the local office of the line.

In the shipwrecked group were two hospital nurses, two deported women, one of whom is Irish, a second Irish stewardess and one other women. The rest are men, all Italians.

They were dressed in odds and ends, mostly contributed by seamen's societies and friends, and were a sad looking lot.

All of the members of the crew interviewed to-day were unanimous in their praise of the conduct of James B. Connolly of Boston, Captain Ingemann, chief steward, and Virginia Clark and Emelia Prochet, nurses, all dealed absolutely the charges of cowardice made against Connolly, and declared that he had not lost his head, had not tried to force his way into the boats, but had helped as he could in helping the women and children into the boats first.

"The criticism of Connolly," said Mr. Morgandi, "is simply without foundation. He showed the greatest calmness throughout. Perhaps he saw too much and understood too much to avoid criticism. He could talk, you know. We can't."

The passengers and crew alike declared that Lieutenan Carnaga, one of the junior stewards, who was with them, was one of the real heroes of the wreck. Time and again, they said, he had risked his life to save others, and as he walked among the survivors to-day was applauded in many ways.

Fought With Mad Woman.

They told of the thrilling rescue of Paola Leoni, the insane woman. She was for down in the hold of the Republic when the collision occurred. Carnaga, not knowing whether or not the ship was going down, thought only of the demented woman and made a rush for below. Down through narrow passageways he went in the darkness, groping his way. When he opened the door the mad woman, terribly excited by the din and by the shock, attacked him. They began a fight, as with infinite patience he struggled to get her into the deck. She is young and powerful, but he finally overcame her struggles, got her to the deck and into a safe place and then he went back for more.

Has Twice Been Decorated.

When the passengers were transferred to the Florida he made trip after trip, looking after the sick. He received several gallant cuts and bruises, and in one full down a companionway almost severed his left thumb.

Further tales of the brave young fellow saved life. The city of Naples decorated him for bravery in a fire and the Italian government for work in the earthquake several years ago in the island of Ischia.

The Romanic carries the largest consignment of provisions sent from this side for the relief of the sufferers, with four carloads of portable frame houses.

SAVAGE DOG AT SCHOOL BITES TWO CHILDREN

James Low, nine years old, and Ercida Maionson, ten years old, were several times bitten by a mongrel dog which attached them to-day in the yard of the Franklin School in Wakefield. The dog rushed into the yard during the morning recess and jumped at the children, knocking them down. He bit at them savagely, leaving three bites on the little boy and two on the little girl.

The attack caused the greatest excitement among the children. They fled in a body, some of the smaller ones leaving the two attacked at the mercy of the dog. The cries of the boy and girl attracted Principal F. Frank Sise. He rushed out and drove the dog off.

It is not believed that the animal was mad. Dr. O'Connell was called, cauterized the dog children's wounds. He said that the dog showed no viscious symptoms.

The boy is the son of Michael Low of No. 49 Bennett street. Ercida Maionson is the daughter of P. J. Maionson of Travers street.

LANDLORDS IN LYNN BLAMED FOR POVERTY

In their annual report to-day the overseers of the poor in Lynn attack the landlords of that city, charging they are largely to blame for the sufferings of the poorer class of tenements, for poor sanitary arrangements and the spread of tuberculosis. The report says in part:

"With a large number of persons out of employment for a long time, the condition of some is pitiful. A low rate of wages and scarcity of work, added to the high price of whole necessities, a second and fourth, have made it impossible for many families to exist without aid.

"Living so few comforts and no luxuries, their lives have been hard ones. But few, if any, improvements are being made in the tenements the poor occupy, and no attempt is made by the owner to keep pace with the progress of these conditions.

"Landlords who own property occupied by the poorer class seem to care only to collect their rents, and take no interest in improving homes.

"It is no wonder that in these ill ventilated rooms, with poor sanitary arrangements, that disease, especially consumption among the occupants. Frequent cases of tuberculosis have been brought to our notice."

SUE TO RECOVER SIGNAL INVENTIONS

The National Telemeter Company through its officers, Eugene N. Foss and Edward F. Barry, have brought suit in the Superior Court seeking to compel the Automatic Electric Signal Company to turn over the inventions and perfected safety devices of Frederick A. Gilman, which it converted on the ground that Gilman had assigned the patents to the Telemeter Company. A hearing will be given Thursday.

DOG TRAVELS 650 MILES TO OWNER

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 29.—Word was received here from the Salt River Valley, Arkansas, that Dr. Hoff, at Hot Springs, Ark., that his famous foxhound Seminole, which was lost in one of the cold trains of the Cash Orchard, had reached home almost starved. The trip from Cash Orchard to Hot Springs compelled the dog to swim both the Mississippi and Arkansas Rivers.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS: FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCKS WEAK AT OPENING

Stock on the local exchange opened rather heavy, showing fractional declines. Settlement of the miners' strike at Globe, Arizona, had the effect of keeping the Globe issues steady. Old Dominion was unchanged and after selling off ¼ from the opening quickly recovered to 34¾.

Weakness was developed during the first half hour in the Copper stocks, Amalgamated and North Butte being the most active and weakest. Arbitrage houses sold Amalgamated, while North Butte was supplied by local brokers.

As the London Copper market was off 12s. 6d. on spot and 10s. on futures, this was used as a bear card by those who were short. Little change was recorded in the rates of the loan crowd and the demand for stock was very small.

Boston & Corbin continued to show weakness and Steel common was sold by New York shorts to 52 during the first hour, nearly 3,000 shares being sold.

DINNERS HEAD LIST OF SMART SOCIAL EVENTS

Dinners are growing in favor as a form of entertainment. One of the most brilliant of the week was that which Mrs. George Draper gave at her home, No. 520 Commonwealth avenue, last night in honor of Mrs. Richard King Thorndike, formerly Miss Mary of New York, whose wedding was an event of the early Fall and who has just returned from a European honeymoon. The Draper home, which is one of the most beautifully appointed in Boston, was beautifully decorated with pink roses and white lilacs. Mrs. Draper wore a most becoming gown of dull blue satin and silver.

Mrs. Eben Draper also gave a dinner last night, but it was a more informal affair.

Another of last night's hospitalities was the dinner dance which Mrs. Augustus Hemenway gave at her Marlboro street home in honor of her daughter, Charlotte, one of the handsomest lads of the year. Miss Charlotte, who has been "out" for in all the smartest affairs of her set, is petite and graceful, with golden brown hair and the roisiest of cheeks. She has any number of admirers, and it is predicted by those who keep close watch of the debutantes that she will be the first of this season's boys to become engaged.

Mrs. Harold Jefferson Coolidge (Edith Lawrence) of Beacon street was another society matron entertaining at dinner last night, as was also Mrs. Lawrence Lowell. Mrs. Stephen H. Bonsett gave a large dinner for young people at her home on Commonwealth avenue.

To-night will be quite as crowded with smart affairs as was last night, for besides the philomathic dance which Miss Fanny Mason is giving at her Commonwealth avenue home and Mrs. Richard Lyman and Miss Helene Peabody, two of this year's most attractive buds, Mrs. A. Lawrence Rotch, whose hospitalities are always large and brilliant, is giving a dinner at her Commonwealth avenue home, and Mrs. Edward D. Brandegee of Brookline is giving a large dinner with Governor and Mrs. Draper as guests of honor.

Miss Amy Lowell will be another dinner hostess this evening, her hospitality taking place at her Brookline home, "Sevenels," Mrs. Lowell, by the way, is quite forlorn since the departure yesterday morning of her cousin friend, Miss Abernathel the Merry Widow, who has been her guest for some time at her Brookline estate, for Canada. Seeing that Miss Lowell is one of the wealthiest as well as one of the most exclusive society women in town other members of her set raised her brows in undisguised surprise when she made Miss Abernathel the Merry Widow her bosom friend—but that is as far as they go, for Miss Lowell's way is supreme and few there are who would dare to criticise.

Mrs. Arthur Smith of Omaha, formerly Harriet White of Brookline, is at Lakewood, where she is convalescing from a serious illness. Her sisters, Mrs. John J. Batchelder, Jr., of Brookline, and Mrs. George Putnam, are with her.

Mrs. Oliver Filley and Miss Nancy Filley sailed Tuesday for Europe to visit Mrs. Fitzwilliams of London. Mrs. Oliver Filley whose wedding took place there early last Spring. Miss Filley's stay on the other side will be short, as she has decided upon Easter as the time for her wedding to Jack Ames, one of the wealthiest catches in town. During her visit abroad Miss Filley will select her trousseau. Another charming bride of the Easter period will be Miss Margaret Stimson, whose engagement to Haskell Dodge Thayer was announced at a fortnight ago. Miss Stimson is en route to the West Indies.

The Boston branch of the American Folk Lore Society will hold its twentieth anniversary meeting at the Vendome this evening. President and Mrs. Putnam will receive and the speakers will be Dr. Clarence Blake, Prof. C. E. Fay, Prof. Kittredge and Prof. Putnam. Miss Clara Poole will sing.

Miss Mary Josephine Amory has returned from a visit in Canada.

Mrs. I. Harris Metcalf is giving the final in her series of receptions at her Marlboro street home this afternoon. Mrs. Metcalf will be assisted in receiving by her attractive daughter-in-law, Mrs. Harris Metcalf.

Mrs. William B. Bacon, who has been in New York since closing her Lenox villa directly after the marriage, early in the month, of her daughter Emily to Mr. Benjamin, will return to her Berkshire villa early next month.

Mrs. Frederick H. Sears is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Thomas Newbold.

"BILLEE" BURKE, THREATENED WITH BLOOD POISONING

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 29.—A New York specialist has been summoned by telegraph to this city to attend Miss Billie Burke, the actress, who is suffering from blood poisoning, engendered by a slight cut on the right hand. Miss Burke's personal physician has also been called from Yonkers. The star appeared last night as "Love Watches" at the Court Square Theatre in spite of the suffering caused by her hand and arm which are greatly swollen.

At the Court Square Theatre in this city last night she suffered considerably. Two doctors were in the wings during the play to which the ailing lead to rail the actress off the stage if the septic condition became too acute.

"THE BARRIER," By Rex Beach

A TALE OF THE KLONDIKE. THE STORY OF A KENTUCKY SOLDIER'S LOVE

Synopsis

JOHN GALE, a trader at Flambeau, on the Yukon, a man who had been in "the States," but who never spoke of his past, married an Indian woman, Ailuna. He had a daughter, Neela, slender and feminine, with dark eyes and the blue-black hair of Egyptian women.

Neela at the time the story opens had not long since returned from a mission school farther down the Yukon. She was so well educated, so well-bred, that she seemed to be a different being from the rough but honest trappers and gold hunters.

The United States Government had just established a post of soldiers there to keep order, as gold was being found in large quantities, prospectors and fortune hunters was coming. Lieut. Burrell, a lieutenant, was in charge of the young post. He was a Kentuckian.

He fell in love with Neela almost as a matter of course. He had a rival, but he didn't know it. Pierre Doret, a French Canadian partner of Gale's. Doret was a good, kindly, honest and masterful woodsman.

A Yukon steamer brought Runnion, a desperate character, from the Upper Yukon. He had been thrown out of Dawson, and hated the young soldier, Burrell, and feared that his daughter had discovered the lieutenant's affection. He plotted to have Runnion shot Burrell by having the latter try to arrest him. Doret saved Burrell's life. Runnion went West, and returned later with money and the law allowed him to stay.

"No Creek Carl," a miner, struck gold some miles from Flambeau. He told Dale and his partner, Dorsey, of the find. Runnion into his confidence and a professional "go good" mark, Stark.

Neela, who had coaxed the secret from her Indian mother, told Burrell, and the gold was. She went to Burrell, told him her love for him, and that she and he would get rich by staking claims there first.

The Canadian had hinted to Dale of his love for the girl, and Dale, who had told him a story of a man who wooed a girl to make her as bad as himself, and how she finally had forsaken him for an honest man she had loved.

Dale and Burrell raced with the miners for the claims. Neela knew a short cut and they camped out over night on the way there. Burrell, an honorable man, fought for honors with himself as to what his escapade with the girl who had bewitched him was leading him to. They arrived at the "pay dirt" and staked Neela's claims before her father, Doret and "No Creek Lee" and the ruffians.

When the claims were staked the camp Lee and Stark expressed their anger that they had been beaten and necessary trick of leaving her in the secret out. Runnion's displeasure was even more open and he fell into loud mouthed mutterings.

"The old man sent the girl on ahead of us to blanket the claims for him," he said. Malloy was so bitter in his mouth that he had to have it out and he said loud enough for Polson Doret to hear:

"Well, if it takes Injun to wood a girl for one night and then face the father; but the old man don't seem to mind any more than she does. I guess he knows what it means, all right."

It seemed a full minute before the French-Canadian gave sign that he had heard, then a strange cry broke from his throat and he began to ramble as if out of his head. Polson allowed the passion to run from his mouth until it had spent its vigor, then said to Runnion:

"Say, mister, you are brave man or dam' fool."

"What do you mean, Frenchy?" said the man addressed, uneasily.

"Somebody gold' de fire' wat you say his' now. Meebe it's gold' be you, m'sieu; meebe it's gold' be you. I can't tell yet, but I'm hope an' pray it's gold' be you, because I like to see you die in a hurry. I nobody ees spik done kin' of lie 'bout Neela Gale."

"YOU leave that to me. When will the other boys be here?"

"To-morrow morning. I told them to follow along four hours behind, and not to run in on us till we had finished. They'll camp a few miles down the creek, and be in early."

"You couldn't get but three, eh "

"That's all I could find who would agree to give up half"

"Can we count on them?"

"Huh!" the other grunted. "They worked with me and Soapy on the Skagway trail."

"Good. Five against three, not counting the girl and the lieutenant," Stark mused. "Well, that will do it." He outlined his plan, then the two returned to the camp to find Lee cooking supper. Polson was there with the others, but, except for his silence, he showed no sign of what had taken place that afternoon.

Stark developed a loquacious mood after supper, devoting himself entirely to Neela in whom he seemed to take great interest. He was an engaging talker, with a peculiar knack of suggestion in story-telling—an unconscious hinting and elusiveness that told more than words could express—and, knowing his West as well, he fascinated the girl, who hung upon his tales with flattering eagerness.

Polson had finished several pipes, and now sat in the shadows in the open door way, apparently tired and dejected, though his eyes shone like diamonds and roved from one to the other. Half unconsciously he heard Stark saying:

"This girl was about your size, but not so dark. However, you remind me of her in some ways—that's why it puts her in my mind, I suppose. She was about your age at the time—nineteen."

"Oh, I'm not eighteen yet," said Neela. "Well, she was a fine woman, anyhow, the best that ever set foot in Klondyke, and there was a great deal of talk when she chose young Bennet over the Gaylord man, for Bennett had been running second best from the start, and Gaylord thought it was settled between her and the other one. However, they were married and left.

The story did not interest the Canadian; his mind was in too great agitation to wait for dead tales; his heart burned within him too fiercely, and he felt the great a desire to put his hands to work. As he watched Burrell and Runnion bend over the table looking at a little pile of gold dust that Lee had taken from under his bunk, his eyes grew red and bloodshot, his breath his hot grim.

Which one of the two would it be, he wondered. From the corner of his eye he saw Gale rise from the bench, stretch and stretched himself to smoke, and take his six-shooter from his belt, then remove the knotted bandanna from his neck, and begin to clean the gun, his head bowed intently earnestly, his face in the shadow. He had ever been a careful and methodical man, Polson, and evidently would not go to sleep with his fire-arm in bad condition.

"Nobody imagined that Gaylord would cause trouble," Stark was saying, "for he didn't seem to be a jealous sort, but quiet and kind of heavy-witted; but one night he took advantage of Bennett's absence and sneaked up to the house." The story-teller paused, and Neela, who was under the spell of his recital, urged him on:

"Yes, yes. What happened then? Go on." But Stark stared gloomily at his hands, and held his silence so long that Neela ate, the tale appearing to have awakened more than a fleeting interest in him.

"It was one of the worst killings that ever happened in these parts," he continued. "Bennett came back to find his wife murdered and the kid gone."

"Oh!" said the girl, in a shocked voice.

"Yes, there was the devil to pay. The town rose up in a body, and we—you see, I happened to be there—are following the man for weeks. We trailed him and the kid clear over into the Nevada desert where we lost them."

"Poor man!"

"Poor man?" The story-teller raised his eyes and laughed stubbornly. "I don't see where that comes in."

"And you never caught him?"

"No. Not yet."

"He died of thirst in the desert, may be, he and the little one."

"That's what we thought at the time, but I don't believe it now."

"How so?"

"Well, I've crossed his trail since then. No, Gaylord is alive to-day, and so is the girl. Sometime well meet. His voice grew cool, and his mood again at the door.

"Couldn't the little girl be found?" said Neela. "What was her name?"

Stark made to speak, but the word was never uttered, for then came a deafening roar that caused Lee's cards to leap and flicker and the air inside the cabin to strike the occupants like a wave. Instantly there was confusion, and Polson, who had sprang to his feet crying out affrightedly, for the noise had come with utter treacherousness.

"My God, I've killed him!" cried Gale, and with one jump he cleared half the room and was beside Stark, while his revolver lay on the floor where he had been sitting.

"What is it?" exclaimed Burrell; but there was no need to ask, for powder smoke was beginning to fill the room and the trader's face grew ashen. It was whiter than that of his daughter, who had crouched fearfully against the wall, and he shook like a man with ague.

But Stark stood silent, and no more composed than any of them, following the first bound from his chair, he had relapsed into his customary calm. There was a blazed up one momentary flash of assurance and anger, but it died straightway, for no man could have beheld the trader's face and not felt compassion. His condition was pitiable, and the sight of a strong man overcome by great pleasure when it was seen that no harm had been done the others strove to make light of the accident.

"Get together, all of you! It's nothing to be excited over," said Stark.

"How did it happen? Runnion finally asked Gale, who had sunk heavily upon the edge of the bunk; but when the old man understood to answer his words were unintelligible, and he shook his head helplessly.

Stark laid his finger on the hole that the bullet had bored in the log close to where he was sitting, and laughed.

"Never mind, old man, it missed me by six inches. You know there never was a bullet that could kill me. I'm six-shooter proof."

Polson led his friend down the trail for half a mile without speaking, till Gale had regained a grip of himself, and muttered, finally:

"I never did such a thing before, Polson, never in my life."

The young man turned squarely and faced him, the starlight illumining their faces dimly.

"Why," said Doret.

"Why?" echoed Gale, with a start. "Well, because I'm careful, I suppose."

"Why?" insisted the Frenchman.

"I—I—— What do you mean?"

"Don' lie wit me, John. I'm happen to be watch you underneat' my hat to see you tron comp' for see if anybody lookin'."

"You saw?"

"Yes."

"I thought you were asleep," said Gale.

CHAPTER VIII.
The Knife.

IN every community, be it ever so small, there are undeniable cliques, and while the little party was still at breakfast on the following morning three such members of society came around the cabin and let fall their packs, greeting the occupants boisterously.

"Well, well!" said Lee, coming to the door. "You're travelin' kind of early, ain't you?"

"Yes—early and late," one of them laughed, while the other two sprawled about as if to rest.

"How far are you goin'?"

The harm was done, and there was no use in being particularly secretive, and them of his discovery and warned them not to follow after.

"And you here, you fellers," he concluded. "I've been forty years at the game and never had a creek named after me, but this one is goin' to be called 'No Creek' Lee Creek or I fight. Doin' it go?"

"Sure, that's a good name, and we'll vote for it."

"Then go as far as you like," said the miner, dismissing them curtly.

"I'll step along with the boys and show them where our upper claim was," volunteered Stark, and Runnion offered to do the same, adding that it would be best to make use of the conflict to carry on the grim fire disappeared into the woods, perfunctorious for the homeward trip.

That night who did be a tin horn gambler who drifted in a month ago, the same as Runnion, or of the others didn't much better," said Gale, when they had gone. "Seems like the old creeks always beat the straight men in."

"Never knowed it to fail," Lee agreed. "There's a dozen good men in camp to one bo se on the fork that but it'll be too late gin we get back."

"Those boys are as soon feller got all de best claims at Klond ike," said Polson. "I guess it's gettin' so I se de same here."

"I don't like this look of this," observed the lieutenant, in the gale'ello. "I'm afraid there's some kind of a job on foot."

"Here's nothing they can do," Gale answered. "We've got our ground staked out, and to jump them is cheese which left."

They were no ly ready to start so for Flambeau when the five men returned.

SHRUBB, LONGBOAT, HAYES AND DORANDO TO MEET IN RACE

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

WILL JEFF BE FIT AS EVER IF HE RETURNS TO RING

DID IT EVER OCCUR TO YOU?--BY TAD.

NEW FIELD FOR THE RED SOX

Hugh McBreen, treasurer and business manager of the Boston American ball team, arrived in the Hub to-day direct from Hot Springs, where he has been busy laying out a ball park for the Red Sox to do their practicing on this Spring.

"We have got a fine place," said McBreen, "and the boys should be able to get all the practice they want. The land has been cleared and sodded, and there only remains a thorough raking off of the stones to make it an ideal location. Everything will be in readiness for the team when it starts south to begin practice.

"There were three ball players at the Springs while I was there, Chappelle, the big Boston National pitcher; Ed Berry, who used to play with us and now belongs to Pittsburg, and Frank Delehanty of the Washington team were there taking the baths and getting in some early work."

FOUR STARS IN MARATHON RACE

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—The climax of all Marathons will be run here St. Patrick's night, when Tom Longboat, the Indian; Alfred Shrubb, the Olympic Marathon winner; Alfred Shrubb, the English champion, and Dorando Pietri, the Italian, meet at Madison Square Garden.

On February 5 Longboat and Shrubb will meet in a race in this city. This race was originally scheduled for January 30, but an injury to Shrubb's eye caused a postponement. The injured member is rapidly healing and the Englishman will be in good shape.

Hayes and Dorando will meet in a return match on Chicago on February 22, since the little Olympic Marathon runner was beaten by Dorando in Madison Square Garden. The time ago he has been taking excellent care of himself and is now in the best of form. He was when he won the English event. Hayes claims that his defeat by Dorando was due to lack of condition.

Preliminary to his race with Shrubb, the Onondaga Indian will meet three men at Washington to-morrow night, but it will be at fifteen miles.

Shrubb will compete against Robert Hallen and Michael Spring, who defeated Longboat last Tuesday night. Hallen will take place in the First Troop armory, Newark, next Thursday night. The distance will be ten miles.

YALE KICKERS ARE OUT EARLY

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 29.—Capt. Coy of the Yale varsity football eleven has started the preliminary practice for the football season of 1909.

Prior to the Spring football practice there is a call for all men who intend to try for the quarterback position on the university team next fall. Eleven men reported to Captain Coy, six quarterbacks and five centers. Captain Coy and Coach Wheaton will have charge of the squad and will be in the gymnasium every afternoon to give them a drill on receiving and passing the ball.

The principal candidate for the centre position are Cooney, Hyde and Lorce. The fight for the position will probably be between Hyde and Cooney. Cooney is much heavier, but Hyde is very aggressive. Lorce is of varsity calibre, and with more experience will make a good player.

HOOSIERS HAVE HORSE BUG.

In Indiana the horse bug has stung more people than in any like territory in the country. "It's true that a majority of the stallions in service are pacers, but in a radius of 100 miles there are Directly, 2:05¾; Major Delmar, 2:06¼; Star Hal, 2:04¾; Sir Alexander, 2:06¾; and John Ward, 2:05¾. With the advent of Hedgewood Boy, 2:02¼, the Hoosier State is certainly due to produce some more great pacers in a few years.

John L. Sullivan's Column

Boston fight fans will have a chance before long to see whether or not John L. Sullivan Jeffries looks, as he is to visit the Hub on a theatrical tour in a few weeks. I predict that the big fellow will draw great crowds. He couldn't have selected a better time for a tour. He is the man of the hour in pugilistic circles, and the American public will not let him alone until they drag him in the ring.

Personally I feel that he will fight Johnson. The public will not be satisfied with anything short of that. In the meantime he is being besieged with offers, and it is little wonder that he is bewildered as to what the future has in store for him.

I suppose I get twenty letters a day asking me how old Jeffries is. The answer is, Jeffries will be thirty-four years old next April 15. It used to be the idea among the old-time trainers that a fighter was at his best from the age of twenty-five to thirty-five, and if this theory is true, Jeffries still has a chance to show the best there is in him.

Neither Corbett nor myself, however, were much good after reaching thirty-one. I was born in 1858 and fought my last winning fight with Kilrain when I was thirty-one when Fitzsimmons knocked him out. Johnson, who was the little from Tommy Burns, is in his thirty-first year.

Battling Nelson is stirring up trouble with some articles he has written. Eddie Santry, a pretty good fighter in his day, has written to tell us account of the argument Nelson has written about a fight they had in Chicago. Nelson says he had Santry beaten on all points. People who saw the bout tell me that Nelson hit Santry about twice during the entire six rounds, and the latter was made to look like a novice by Santry. Maybe Nelson could have beaten his man in a finish fight, but not in six rounds.

Eddie Hurley is another who is aroused over Nelson's pieces. Nelson says he was pounded of a battle with Hurley. The latter is alive and in excellent shape at the present time, and he has wired his backer to let $2,500 that Nelson can't beat him in any number of rounds the Battler may name. There isn't much of a chance for this match, however.

A lot of my friends who read about having the President a rabbit's foot have asked me to send them one. I am all out of rabbit's feet at present, but am sorry to say I can't make good on these requests for a fellow writes me from the Montana State's claim that he has made a beautiful bridle out of horse hair and he wants me to sell it for $100. I bet he can get money enough to pay a lawyer to fight his case, as he says he was lynched unjustly if anybody wants a horse hair bridle here is the chance.

John L. Sullivan.

Dear Sir—On Wednesday, January 20, I was a guest of honor at the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick and Polar Star Lodge, F. and A. M., and will notice that I used son his name as Peter Mar stead. Please correct.

Hotel Cecil. J. P. G.

You are foolish to do business with any joking bookmaker, whose limit is 50 to 1. But to observe your request, I will say the amount was made to stop the parlay when the limit was reached. Your parlay loses.

John L. Sullivan.

Dear Sir—A bet is that Leach Cross knocked out Kennedy in one round. Who wins? Let us know if the pair ever meet?

X. and X.

No such bout is on the record.

John L. Sullivan.

Dear Sir—Does Jim Willie Fitzgerald and Jack Root ever fight? If so, who won? Was it a knockout route. If they met three times, how many rounds?

ATHLETE.

You both lose. Gans and Fitzgerald met twice. In the first bout Gans knocked out Fitz in ten rounds and in the second Gans won in ten rounds.

John L. Sullivan.

Dear Sir—What are the height of Jeffries, Corbett, Sullivan, Fitzsimmons, Ruhlin, Corbett, Fitzsimmons, Ruhlin, Choynski, Jeffries, 6 feet 1¼ inches; Corbett, 6 feet 1 inch; Fitzsimmons, 5 feet 11¾ inches.

Many answers to questions are crowded out for want of space. They will appear in next Sunday's issue.

WELSH EASY FOR BAT OR PACKY, SAYS ABE

Abe Attell says that Freddie Welsh will be easy picking for either Battling Nelson or Packy McFarland. She has fought both Welsh and Nelson, and has seen McFarland in action several times. He is one of the shrewdest judges of fighters in the country, and ranks a statement from him as good as given serious consideration. Attell knows if anybody does. "Welsh does not stand a chance against either Nelson or McFarland," he says Attell expressed his opinion on the lightweight champion. "He lacks the punch. He hit me plenty of times in our ten-round fight at Los Angeles, and did not even sting me. He is a clever fellow, with lots of speed, but is not classy enough for Packy or the Dane.

"If Welsh fights McFarland again, and this mate's is wanted by the coast fans, McFarland will win to a certainty. He is too rugged for the Briton. Welsh simply could not hurt Nelson at all, and it would only be a question of time until Nelson finished him. It will take a man with a snappy punch to whip Nelson, and Welsh will never have that kind of a punch.

Old Jeff Doesn't Know Whether He Is There or Not

WHAT DO OLD-TIME FIGHTERS LACK?

BY TAD.

What is that mysterious thing which is lacking in the old-timers who go back into the ring after a rest of a year or so?

Jim Corbett looked as well as he ever did in his life the night he met Jeff in Frisco, yet after the bout started the big champ was a terrible piece of cheese.

Fitz, the night he met Jeff in the same town, looked as dangerous as ever. He looked well in training, ran well on the road, felt well before the go, yet after four or five rounds he was like a kitten in the hands of the big fellow.

Tom Little Dixon the night he lost to Brophy in two rounds at Philadelphia was a picture of health. When the bell rang he wasn't there at all, and went down on a bump in the stomach.

Kid Lavigne on his last appearance fairly bloomed with health. He met Young Cox at Philadelphia. The writer was at the ringside. The Kid as he stood in his corner was a ringer for the Kid who beat Eckoott. He was as trim as he ever was in his life. He said before the fight he never was any better and thought that the rest had done him good. He knocked himself out trying to hit Cox. He was like an amateur in his first ring go. He was not the old Kid in any way that you could figure.

Is it that way with Jeffries, or not?

Why is it that Jeff can't tell whether he's there or not? They say he is faster than ever on his feet. His sparring partner thinks that Jeff is there with the goods. When he goes into the ring will Jeff find that something missing?

What is it that the old-timers lack when they go back?

Lepper Hughes wants to walk Mr. Westcott across the continent for a side bet.

"I'll only eat $5 worth a day and I guarantee to beat him by a hundred miles," says Hughes. "Put in the Bronze they know me. They'll bet that I can beat Schrubb or Longboat or any of them in fifty miles. I'm fifty-nine years old now, but that's too young for these fellows."

How did they happen to call me Lepper, Jeff Hughes? Why, a man wanted to build me a bridge across to Europe so that I could walk, but I says 'Never mind. I'll go across, and they call me leper."

Harry Harris, this once clever feather-weight, is now dealing out tickets at the box office of the New York Theatre. He is on down hunters should call up and see Harry. Front row seats are a pipe to smooch.

A French sporting magazine arrived to-day with full page pictures of Jess Jamsette. They picture him leaving the train upon his arrival, boxing in the gym with some flabby French boy, and another on a horse ready for a ride.

Chevy stands. You could think Joe was the President the way they played him up.

Dear Tad—I write to say that I am the champion chicken eleaner of Brookline, and I wish to challenge any cook in Boston or Brookline. I can pick and clean a chicken or turkey in ten minutes and any kind of fish in less time. I will put up a bet of $25 to any man that will beat me. I will meet him any place that he wants to meet me. Am also a trubber, but I ain't looking for no fight at present, just chicken cleaning. Come on, you feather pullers, and lets see what you can do.

Now they are accusing Charles Dickens of stealing his first curve, because he brought out Oliver Twist.

Charley Murphy arises to remark that racing is game of Chance, Frank is betting short at Los Angeles.

"Down West McGinnity" is a regular song by New York just now. The "down east" boys seem to be jumping off pretty.

By way of a compliment to Roger Bresnahan, St. Louis writers are thinking of naming the Cubs' new park Luna Dar Park.

Clark Griffith says that a ball player has only a right to "give a game" because he sees a big piece of ice on the way to the park and he wants to cool his nerves.

Baseball fever strikes the Governor. Although Governor Hoch of Kansas is prognosticating for the championship of the Western league, he is the owner of a Wichita team, and has two canes.

The wheel of time has brought completely round Jimmy Callahan, manager of Pittsburg. He started baseball career with Pittsburg, and will return to the New York state league, where he started after playing in several other leagues.

Callahan as an Intermountain League, embracing baseball in the cities, Salt Lake City, Ogden, Butte and Boise. Before long thereby be an International League, taking in Paris, Brest, Roanoke, Newport, McKinley and Pepperstepp.

Baseball in Canada is dead sure on Southern Burns. He blames him for all his trouble. He tried to sign Pitchers Walter Johnson and Joss, claiming that Burns told them to hold out. It is said he is willing to trade the club to New York for Ellerfeld and failing in this, to sell it with no other offer.

Bobby Lowe is not to have clear sailing in his new role as the managership of the Milwaukee Brewers, Capitol League franchise. Bert Gilbert, a New York boy, has a contract for the job, and as will the new owner, C. Breeze, for the management of Lowe's appointment has been upheld.

DODGERS WOULD GIVE M'INTYRE FOR HERZOG

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—The Brooklyn club still is hot after Infielder Herzog of the Giants. McGraw has demanded a pitcher in exchange for his utility man, and it was announced yesterday that Brooklyn probably would offer Harry McIntyre, one of the best right-handed pitchers in the National League. Brooklyn's willingness to let go of McIntyre may be attributed to the fact that both stricklett and Scanlon, two good pitchers who were not with the team last year, have signed up for the coming season. Herzog would help materially the Dodger infield.

Grant Page will have some of the best bred youngsters in the land to work on when he takes up his duties as trainer for E. B. Cox. The Pennsylvania man is spending on a more extensive scale than any longline. His expected crop of 1909 foals will be by Admiral Dewey, 2:09¾; Moonglo, 2:11¾; Del Cosgrove, 2:09¾; Boston Voyage, 2:12¾; Todd, 2:14¾; Arthur Boots, 2:11¾; Chamberlain, 2:17¾; son of Sunol, 2:08¼; Imogene, 2:11¼; Pixie 2:12¾; She, 2:12¾; Directly Marden, 2:12; American Belle, 2:12¾.

HORSE NEWS TRACK GOSSIP

The first amateur driving club was organized in 1871 by Hamilton Busby in New York City, and Commodore Schuyler was president.

H. L. Hasty, Springfield, states that his mare Isabel Rose, is the best pacing mare in Illinois, a record of 2:23 at Northampton last fall.

Ed. Geers, business secretary of Dexter, O., is dangerously ill with cancer of the throat. George Ten Eyck, secretary at Lexington, O., is slowly recovering from a recent paralytic stroke.

Dr. Walter Wilson will Ewing is attending the Indianapolis Veterinary College at Indianapolis, and will graduate in the spring. Dr. Wilson is the only student in this line to receive training and driving.

Trainer Harry Arnson, of Cleveland, is a former Galt, Ont., will make an effort to capture the Boston Handicap with Lou Dillon, and will be driven by Murphy. Arnson is also preparing the four for the Futurity, and the horse will, if he wins, be driven by Murphy. Lou Dillon's record is 2:01¼. She is a full sister to last year's champion trotting colt Lou Dillon.

While it has not been definitely decided, Lee Dillon, 2:08¾, probably will be bred this year to either Bingen (2:06¾), or Peter the Great (2:07¾). While Lee was in the list with Bingen (2:04¾) as of the fastest pacers, he also is a horse that should be good in his class in 1909.

W. R. Allen, of the Allen Farm, Lexington, will have add colts to go to Alabama, Missouri, Nebraska, Utah, Delaware, Connecticut, Maryland, Vermont, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Kentucky and Texas. Mr. Allen has had a mortgage upon a part of the stock, but will personally sell a number up there, but not one has been sold. The wide diffusion of these colts will bow general is the hopeful feeling with regard to the future of the trotter.

The Russians are up against a rather interesting problem in connection with their efforts to create a second generation of American-bred trotters. It seems that the Russian Government purchased a blood in him are as good as the best, and while the second generation of Americans has been unsatisfactory, the animal has shown qualities, and the question arises whether a new American cross of some other blood to get the desired results.

ABBATICCHIO MAY NOT JOIN PIRATES

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 29.—Trouble has developed over a contract between Edward Abbaticchio, second baseman, and Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburg Baseball Club. It is thought now that the second baseman may not be found in the line-up next season, as a cut in salary has been offered him, and he is protesting against it. Abbaticchio has announced that he will not play the coming season if the cut in salary is to go. The club officials declare the cut will stand, and it develops to-day that Abbaticchio is signing a long term contract, specified that he was not to play the infield. The crafty Dreyfuss had Tommy Leach sign to "use to play third base," and it now develops that Leach is being held for second base in case of trouble.

Jimmy Gardner's "oh-look" punch opened the eyes of even the oldtimers at the Washington-Jefferson club, Philadelphia.

Driscoll says he is not going home because he has failed to get a fight. He says he will stay for the annual benefit of the Narrath House for Cripples in March.

Billy Papke will hook up with either Jim Thompson or Jim Driscoll in Sydney 22 at Hot Springs. The promoters will decide on one of the men, who has the best offer.

Ed Kelly, the fast heavyweight, who has been making a record for himself in Philadelphia, has signed to meet Con Coughlin, the Australian, to match with Al Kaufman, Jim Flynn or any other fighter Manager Harrison can get for him.

Jim Driscoll, the English featherweight champion is quite a busy fighter. Charley Haley has been matched to meet him in a 20-round bout at Cardiff, and Tommy Loughlin, the Quaker City fighter, will go to London to meet the Welsh featherweight champion.

Johnny Thompson, Scranton's cyclone one, is matched to meet Joe Mandot, probably to-night, at his best at Pocatello, Idaho, with Peter Sullivan, Jack Britton and Jim Flynn to follow. Abe Attell and Eddie Kelly, the Philadelphia lightweight, have deliberately declined to meet each other at Spokane, Attell giving him a lump sum for passing.

With a total of 1,286 it begins to look like Chet Ary will be right in the hunt from now on. Young Burns has hung up against 1,174 now through having no home alleys.

Ad Wolgast's recent Wilder drop at last come spurred the bouncing bundled on by the Berbying fan has now got the lightweight champion on his toes, and he is now training in earnest. Jack Sheehan has been lolling right along to keep an eye out as his sparring partner, but he is now capable of getting a real team in the Ring Palace.

Young Ahearn, the Lowell lightweight, has been matched by Manager Harry Pollock to meet Young Kid Murphy, of Providence, at Providence, March 1. Ahearn has been showing up some classy fighting of late, and Pollock thinks he has the goods to put him up in the fast middleweight class. Murphy is a clever boxer and will be a hard man to defeat.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

FELLSWAY CLUB WILL RACE AT COMBINATION

There is certain to be plenty of amateur racing at Combination Park the coming season; this fact having been brought out at the initial banquet of the Fellsway Driving Club at the Quincy House, the organization having signed the lease for the use of the property for twenty-four Saturdays and five holidays.

The Fellsways are the baby driving club of the State, its inception being as late as last April, yet to-day it numbers in membership upwards of two hundred drivers from Somerville, Medford, Malden, Arlington, Stoneham, Chelsea and other suburbs and is growing.

The banquet was one of the most enjoyable ever held by a body of united men. All present were strong on the encouragement of amateur and speedway sport. In taking upon themselves the expense of overhauling so large a plant as Combination Park is great of the thorough gameness of the men.

Had 671 Horses Reced.

E. H. Hodgkins was toastmaster. He ably filled his position. Secretary Frank Morrison read the report of the club in the past racing season. During the season were twenty-five racing days in which forty-nine trotters and sixty-seven ponies took part, owned by seventy-three different members. An aggregate of 671 horses took the word in 296 races, requiring 974 heats in finding the winners. John O'Day's sell captured the cup for the horse going the fastest heat—80½ seconds. He is the property of William Fleming of Lynn. With seventy-eight points, gained the harness for the horse making the most points and he is the property of H. W. Smith.

President J. F. Brooks said that in taking Combination it meant that all of the members must take off their coats and work hard, and work together. In entering the enterprise mentioned, he hoped that the members would not forget there is need of a half-mile speedway on the boulevard in construction through Medford. He believed a petition ought to be circulated and presented to the Metropolitan Park Commissioners. There is, too, great need of a parent association to look after driving clubs in New England. Bills were now on Beacon Hill of vital interest to the horsemen. These should be watched for the good of every person owning a horse.

President J. W. Linnehan of the Dorchester Driving Club made a neat address. He declared no amateur race should be held over a two-lapped course with less than four horses in each event. He would like to have his club meet the Fellsways at least four times during the coming season and would promise the finest sport possible from his fellow club members in promoting interclub matches.

Challenge from Quannapowitt.

President G. R. Shackford of the Quannapowitt Driving Club told how he is after having the track have only four to eight horse racing this year. The general public is thoroughly tired of seeing a couple of trotters or pacers matched against each other. This was generally the finish of the contest worth the time in going to the track. He was also in favor of getting his shoulder to the wheel in giving a central body of driving clubs, and the sooner it arranged the Fellsways and any other driving club to intensify meetings with Quannapowitt.

George M. Davis of the Fellsways related some promises held forth, but it now seems to the question of every horseman in Greater Boston taking a helping hand in supporting sufficient sport to attract the public to the weekly, holiday and intermediate meets.

It developed during the dinner that the Medford Lodge of Elks are willing to arrange with the Fellsways in holding a big field day, having racing and other sports.

Monitor was made that the Dorchester Driving Club have selected Joseph F. Feeney chairman of its racing committee, meaning a good man at the helm for the coming season.

Richard Lawrence was absent, but solely through his having in the afternoon sold his well-known pacing gelding Rey del Diablo, 2:11¼, to a party in Portland, Me., and the campaigner was shipped late in the day to his destination.

HANK O'DAY FALLS IN LINE

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—Following Fielder Jones's denial of the story that he wanted $10,000 for his services with the White Sox next season, Hank O'Day, National League umpire, and Frank Smith, the club's spitball artist, have joined the "didn't say it" club.

O'Day denies the story that he was hesitating about signing his contract a false, according to Hank he has already signed the contract and returned it to President Pulliam.

Smith denies that he ever said he would jump the Sox.

Marto Outclassed by Clever Briton IS EASY FOR DRISCOLL

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Jem Driscoll of England easily defeated Johnny Marto of New York in ten rounds at the Fairmont Athletic Club, and gave one of the most brilliant exhibitions of cleverness ever seen in this city. Marto received a terrible beating and was staggering into frequent clinches in the last round.

Time and time again Driscoll brought the crowd to its feet by his wonderful cleverness in getting away from the furious rushes of his opponent, and although Marto was game all through and did his best to reach the English lad with terrific swings for the jaw, he was never able to land clean at any time during the bout. The fight by rounds follows:

Round One.

An Example for American Millionaires

By LILIAN BELL

I WONDER if our American millionaires, who are constantly turning out children who become worthless prodigates, insane criminals and even murderers, are too egotistic and complacent to take a hint from the courage and sanity of the Franco-American millionaire, M. Louis Leonard, who has come back to the land of his wife's birth to enable his three eldest children to secure a working knowledge of American habits of procedure.

And, in passing, let me say that America must set a fearful example, and one mostly to be avoided, to children brought up in such mental health as M. Leonard's.

This man has the wisest theories of bringing up children that I have ever encountered. He does not seem to belong in the class of millionaires, he is so sane. He possesses the wisdom of true citizenship, and whatever country can claim his children when they are grown can boast of at least eight desirable citizens.

And why desirable?

Let me tell you.

Although M. Lombard's fortune is conservatively estimated at fifteen millions and he lives in magnificent luxury on an immense estate in Northern Italy, his children are taught that they will get none of his money which they cannot shove, by their method of conserving and distributing what he gives them as children, that they are worthy to inherit.

Makes Them Work

He pays them for all the useful services they perform, around the house or estate, in proportion to their age and the value of their services.

He punishes them by fining this earned money away from them, also in just proportion to the offense. This teaches them the value of small sums of money and makes them think. It also teaches them the use and value of honest work, and, above all, not to be ashamed of it.

Think of it, you taxpayers, who have that got through with the expense of two murder trials for an American millionaire's son who is the victim of OUR progressive American procedure of bringing up sons!

Not over a month ago one of the most brilliant young men, and son of a multi-millionaire, was committed to an asylum by his family, hopelessly and incurably insane, the victim of our American millionaire habit of bringing up children.

Think of it, you mothers of girls whose lives have been wrecked by the irresistible temptations these rich men's sons are trained to spread before the eyes of poor, pretty, helpless young girls!

Rich to Be Pitied

The children of the American rich are more to be pitied than children in factories.

Little heirs and heiresses are watched from their cradles by an incredible army of adventurers, swindlers, kidnappers, adulterers of both sexes, fortune hunters, tapers of every known variety, armed with every known device.

These wretched children will never know the joy of one disinterested friendship or the blessing of one unselfish love, and cut out the length and breadth of their whole lives.

When people really learn that enormous riches bring more curses than blessings, fathers will not handicap their helpless children from birth with golden promises which destroy their every hope of achieving the real things of life.

To-morrow's Best Bargains

IN BOSTON'S BIG STORES

E. T. SLATTERY'S Tremont street shop has some wonderful values in ladies' tailored suits and misses' one-piece dresses. A splendid assortment of odd suits, all this season's popular models, made from fine imported materials, serges, broadcloths and cheviots, with rich linings in fancy and plain effects, that originally sold for $32.50 up as high as $55, have been marked to $19.75, and a few as low as $15. The misses' dresses in one-piece style are fancy made and are smart little models, reduced from $15 and $20 to $8.50.

CHANDLER & CO.'S Tremont street shop have arranged a special sale of high-grade corsets for Saturday at $1.98. A beautiful model, made of silk batiste with embroidered figures in white, light blue or pink, trimmed at top with deep lace and insertion of good quality, with two rows of satin ribbon and having two pairs of strong hose supporters attached at front and sides—a regular $6.50 model for $2.50. An excellent corset for the average figure and may be had in sizes from 19 to 30.

THE HENRY SIEGEL CO. will have on sale Saturday to-morrow some remarkable values in tailored linen and fancy madras waists for 98 cents—all regular $2 models. One is made with Gibson plait and breast pocket, and another model with narrow plaits across front. Just four dozen of them, containing all sizes.

PILENE'S have especially priced one of the smartest little dresses for the school girl at $2.50. It is a regular $4 model, and made of fine quality serge, in navy and red. The waist is box plaited back and front and trimmed with bulldescloth trimmed with black shell braid; also pipings of the broadcloth at waistband, neck and sleeves. The skirt is extra full made, with deep side plaits. A very practical model for the girl from 6 years to 14 years of age, and a bargain.

B. H. WHITE CO. will place on sale Saturday about four dozen children's flannelette nightdresses, suitable for girls 7 years to 12 years, at just half price. Gowns made from striped and plain white flannelette of fine quality, that have been selling for 50 cents each, may now be had at 25 cents each. Shop early if you need a supply, as these are bargains.

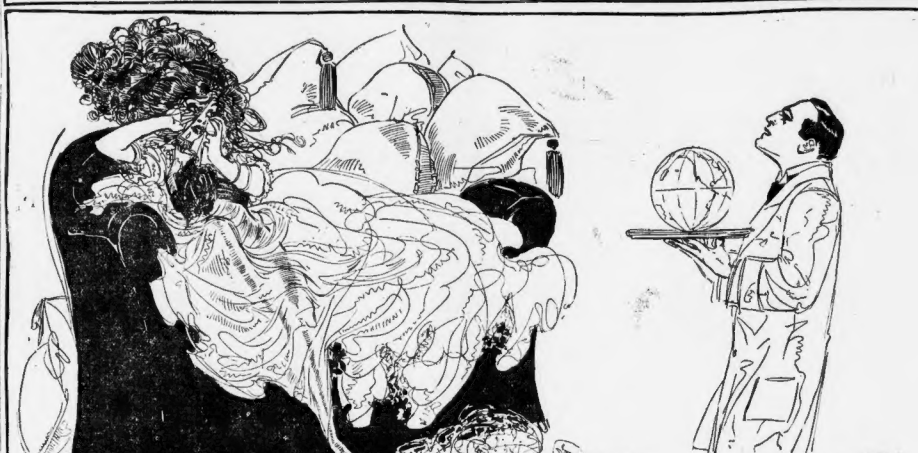
THE BOSTON DEPARTMENT Store's special offering for Saturday should interest boys and girls. There are a number of pyrography sets, consisting of a benzine bottle, alcohol lamp, platinum point cork handle, rubber tubing and bulb, in a handsome base-wood box, and three extra points, a color cuff, cuff protector and glove box, each one designed for burning—the whole thing complete for $1.14. This special set will be sold one day only at this price.

PLUMMER'S misses' department is the place to shop Saturday for a bargain in a tailored suit. One lot of odd suits, made from fine quality worsteds and novelty materials, every one a well-fitted model, with flared or plaited skirts, that formerly sold for prices up to $18.50, marked to $4.95. At this price they are expected to close out early.

THE JORDAN MARSH CO. will sell for one day Swedish floss that is used for embroidering pillows and counterpanes at half price. It comes a dozen skeins in a package and usually sells for 25 cents a package but to-morrow you can purchase it for 12½ cents a package. Black, white and a large assortment of colors will be found.

THE SLAVE HUSBAND — BY NELL BRINKLEY

No. 1—The Man Who Is Brought to His Knees and Held in Bondage by His Wife's Tears



Then the worshipful slave flies to the rescue, and perjures himself to swear her tears away.

LO! One little Lady kicking up a vast row because her man made her a slave! With all the myriad Lady Folk of the world that there are, going merrily through it making such absolute and thorough slaves of their husbands! And the dear God love 'em! How they'd lift their eyebrows up to their bright hair if you told it to 'em in their ears!

But see now! Just the little everyday, innocent, kind-hearted, chattering woman, who passes you every day in the hurrying streets, or who drinks English breakfast at your house on a blizzardy afternoon, might be a Most Illustrious Haughty Sultana, Queen of the East, for all the magnificent slaves, all in one man, that she sways under the sceptre of her curling irons.

And this is one way she makes a kow-towing adoring Slave of her man. A willing one, too, if she can cry "pretty." Even when she makes wry faces, and is ugly, and all washed out when she cries, he's a slave, just the same; 'cause then they scare him, and God bring her ugly, and all washed out when she cries, he's a slave, just the same; 'cause then they scare him, and God bring her pretty, like a little child, with the silver tears trembling on her cheeks, and one of her irregular little nose, and flooding her big eyes, while her red lower lip shakes and quivers. Oh, me!

When they haven't so very much money, and she knows it—but that frock in Le Fay's window blinded her eyes and she paid out her little roll of green bills and wagged it home with a queer stirring of unrest in her conscience, that grows and swells to a breathless quake inside her when it's time for him to come home. And then when he does, and she haltingly spread it out and tries to smile over it, and then she sees the pain in his eyes and the hurt drawing around his mouth; and because there is nothing that makes a fine-hearted woman cry quicker than hurting the man she loves, the tears stand in her throat long before he sends her to the pronches her for putting so much in one little purse as frail as air when they have so little to throw to the Winds of Heaven. And then she cries. Some Ladies Lady Folk can cry to order, but most women's tears of regret are hot from the heart.

When his best girl cries "pretty," like a little child.

And then when he goes to her, she the rescue and perjures himself to swear her tears away. "It's not hurt, him! Bless her, he didn't mean it so hard! That frock will never phase him! There's plenty of green bills, and she may have another. Hurt? Not him! Feel bad? Yo gods! Not while he loves her!"

And so he shows all the signs of his serfdom. You can see how it is. Can a man with any heart in him see a little Kid cry and not stop to make it feel better? Well, so it is!

A Bettina who can cry and look the least wee bit pretty still is like a Kid for her throat tugs before he would see it pronches her for putting so much in one little purse as frail as air when they have so little to throw to the Winds of Heaven. And then she cries. Some clever Lady Folk can cry to order, but most women's tears of regret are hot from the heart.

maybe she's afraid of him. Of him!"

turns silently into his arms, so gladly and humbly, with a long sigh. And one more knot is tied in his bonds.

But he doesn't know; and if he did! Pooh! He wouldn't care. Selah.

How They Got Their Millions

Andrew Carnegie Fulfilled All the Requirements of the Law on Which Success Depends

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

BETWEEN the law that works at the most distant frontier of the Solar System and the law that works in one's finger tips there is an eternal reciprocity.

In fact, these are not two laws, but one, in the remote case guiding the planets, and their orbits, and in the other its instance guiding the blood corpuscles along the digit veins.

The fact—that of the oneness and sameness of law—will explain the marvelous career of Andrew Carnegie, will tell us just how the Dunfermline weaver's son became the multimillionaire.

Carnegie succeeded in the same way, and for the same reason, that the old Roman did—because he was built for success, and because he acted up to the rules upon which success depends.

The short, stocky frame, broad forehead and massive jaw, supplemented by the iron will and indomitable courage, give us in Mr. Carnegie an almost perfect modern replica of the Roman legionary.

The legionary conquered because, under the existing conditions, he fulfilled all the requirements of the conqueror; and Carnegie made his millions because by his birth-gift and by his methods he deserved them.

From the day, way back in 1840, when he went to work in the Allegheny City cotton factory at $1.20 a week, to the day when he retired with his piled-up millions, Carnegie carefully observed all the rules and conditions of Success.

Had a Great Ambition

Whatever he did he did well.

Some distinguished man declared that if his son was a chimney sweep he would strive to fill him with the ambition to sweep out Vesuvius; and Epimenides, when appointed street commissioner of his native Thebes, said he would make the office so noble by his devotion that when he got through with it the best of them would not be ashamed to hold it.

So Carnegie invariably went about his formoubidding. By thoroughness and faithfulness, even in the humblest tasks that were confined to him, he steadily enhanced his value to his employers, and at the same time hastened the day when he should be free to enter upon an independent career.

From the start Carnegie had the priceless benefit that always comes from a concentrated purpose. In his mind all was subordinated to the one idea of making money.

As Napoleon, from the day of Toulon, never took his mind's eye off the throne to which he aspired, Carnegie was, from the day he landed in America, intent on the fortune that eventually came to him.

Could any man have done this? As well ask if any man could have done what Napoleon did. The Carnegies and Napoleons are exceptional men, and achieve exceptional results; but even they must reach the results by conforming to the laws that govern them.

To the Napoleons and Carnegies, Nature gives thrones and millions, but it is for those things that they live; while upon the Shakespeares, Newtons, Emersons and Lincolns she bestows other rewards—always according to the kind of man it happens to be.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

QUITE RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A few months ago one of my friends became serious in his attentions to me. I wrote him that I did not reciprocate his affections and took offence and, when we met later, he told me the time, but did his best to let me see that he wished to be cool toward me. I learned, however, that he went there on purpose to see me, and, when he did so, he felt so low that he could not speak and that he did not act natural all the evening.

I want to ask you if I acted quite right on another occasion. He came up to a ball where I was the only person he knew. I went to him and asked him to stay among my friends. While dancing I noticed him if he harbored any hard feelings toward me and told him if he did he was entirely wrong, as I was all in the hands of fate and cannot place any hearts. Finally I ended by asking him to be friends and he was glad to, and so I think a whole lot of his gentlemen. Miss Fairfax, but I would never love him. Do I right in encouraging a friendship?

FRIEND-LOVER.

AS long as you were quite honest and told him that you could be nothing more than a friend to him, you were right in offering your friendship if he cared to have it. If he is content with friendship I see no reason why you should not be the best of friends.

INVITE HIM TO CALL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very much in love with a young fellow who works next door to the office where I am a stenographer. While he is always talking to girls and is very popular, he doesn't seem attracted to any one of them. Still he comes in to see me occasionally and seems to like me, but how can I tell his love? He came to see me at the house about three weeks ago, and I would like to continue the friendship, but do not know how to go about it. I know that I wish to do so without seeming bold and forward.

THEO. T.

IF you gave him a general invitation to call whenever he cared to, I do not see that you can ask him again. But if you only asked him to the house on that occasion there would be no harm in renewing the invitation. When you meet to-day offer treat him with friendly cordiality.

Can You Add Up Meal Checks for the Hall-Rooms?

"IT'S too bad Perky isn't here," said Percy. "Dining without him comes high." "Yes," Perdie agreed, "especially since your check is twice as much as mine."

"Don't be so peevish," rejoined Percy. "If yours were twice as much as mine we'd have to give them an I O U for thirty-seven cents."

"I can't help thinking," continued Perdie, "that if yours were only half as much as mine we'd have eight cents left for the cigarettes."

Can you tell how much money the boys had between them?

One hundred puzzle books will be distributed among those who send answers addressed to Puzzle Editor, in care of this paper.

Following are some attempts at solution of the puzzle already received:

Dear Puzzle Editor—The Hall Rooms stowed away forty cents' worth of food, and had only thirty-three cents with which to pay the bill. LOUIS CHAMBERS.

Dear Puzzle Editor—I figure that Perdie ate twenty cents' worth and Percy forty.

GRACE OXNELL.

Dear Puzzle Editor—The boys had forty-three cents. If Perdie had eaten twice as much as Percy their combined checks would have amounted to eighty cents and they would have been thirty-seven cents shy.

Spinster Lady Tells Why She's a Suffragette

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"ARE you a suffragette?" said the Spinster-Lady's friend, throwing down the magazine she had been reading.

"I am, indeed," said the Spinster-Lady emphatically, "and so should you be if you were not too indolent to be more than an onlooker at life."

"Dear-dear," replied the latter, teasing laugh. "No need to get so worked up over it, my dear. Why should I be a suffragette?"

"Because you should have the interests of your sex and society at large, at heart."

"But I don't think that most women know enough to vote intelligently."

"Let them learn, then. It is high time they awoke to their possibilities and responsibilities."

Voting Takes but Little Time

"What would become of the home, if all the women were voting and fussing over politics?"

"My dear," said the Spinster-Lady impatiently, "you might just as well be a them, you talk so unreasonably and unnecessarily.

"I don't men find time to do other things than vote?" One would think that as soon as women had learned to vote they expected to spend her entire time with her head in a ballot box."

"Who would look after the children?"

"Are not mother, just as she always done. Do you think that all the ballot boxes on earth could uproot the instinct of maternal that she wants to have some voice in the governing of affairs that directly affect her children."

"Come, now; if you had a vote would you use it?"

Present System Unfair

"Would I use it? Most certainly I would use it. As you know, own some property. I pay taxes on it, just as my next door neighbor, who is a man, does on his. I earned the money to buy that property.

"My sister-in-law, who is a widower with four children, pays taxes on her property. We are allowed to pay full taxes, but we are not allowed to vote. Do you call that fair?"

"Well, it doesn't seem quite right, does it? But there are comparatively few women who want to vote. The majority of them are content to stay at home and leave the voting to their men folk."

"Then all the more shame to them. Every woman should study the suffrage question, and she should study it so, herself, without any appeal to man's prejudiced opinion. Woman suffrage is bound to come, no man might just as well submit gracefully."

Can't Hold Women Back

"You feel that it really is coming?"

"I know it is coming. Woman is prying her wings tentatively, as it were, but when she once realizes the heights to which she can soar, there will be no holding her back."

"I can't help but feel she will lose some of her femininity."

"Not one atom of it. She will be just as feminine, and just as fine in every way as ever. Why, my dear, to hear the 'antis' talk, one would think that we were all fighting for something that did not belong to her, when, really, we are only fighting for her rights."

"Then you do think less of her. They hate mannish women."

"They hate, rightly, the new state of affairs very quickly, and anyway, woman will not be forced to vote."

It's Woman's Turn at Last

"It is woman's turn; that is all. For generations man has restrained her in every way. He has forced her to be content with her own great privileges of womanhood.

"To-day she is branching out in all directions. With her independence as wage earner, she has come independent of man.

"It is all very fine to cry: 'Where are the girls of yesterday?' I tell you that the girls of to-day are going to be the finest product that humanity has produced, and woman suffrage is going to be the foundation of their greatness."

The Way to Shadowtown

SWay to and fro in the twilight gray,
This is the ferry of Shadowtown.
It sails away at the end of the day,
Just as the darkness closes round.

Rest, little hand, on my shoulder—so;
A sleepy kiss is the only fare,
Drifting away from the world we go,
Baby and I in the rocking chair.

See, where the firelogs glow and spark,
Glitter the lights of Shadowland.
The rolling drops on the window—hark—
Are ripples lapping upon its strand.

There where a mirror is glancing dim,
A lake lies shimmering, cool and still;
Blossoms are wavering over its brim,
Those over there on the window sill.

Rock slow, more slow, in the dusky light.
Silently lower the anchor down.
Dear little passenger, say "Good Night"—
We've reached the harbor of Shadowtown.

DARING GIRL SAVES CHUM FROM CANAL

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 29.—Ellen Van Riper, eleven years old, saved the life of Margaret Bowyer, a schoolmate of her own age. On their way home from school the girls ventured across the thin ice on the Morris canal in West Paterson and went through. Both are recovering.

MONEY TALKS! $200 SAYS: "TAKE ME"

$200 NAME BLANK.

I am now and have been for more than sixty days a regular reader and purchaser of the Boston Sunday American.

My home address is.....

.....

Signature .....

Fill out this blank and mail or send it with your answer to:

THE IDEA EDITOR,

Boston Sunday American,

80 Summer St., Boston.

Have You sent in your name and address, which is equivalent to putting in your claim for part of that $200 in gold which the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will soon distribute among its great family of readers?

If you have not yet done so you'd better give the matter your attention today.

You haven't many days longer. The gold coin pile is all soon to be distributed. The contest will close several days before the judges begin their onerous task of going through the thousands of letters that have been received.

Therefore, to be on the safe side and be sure your letter will get there in time for action you had better fill out to-day the accompanying blank form, giving your correct address and mail it without delay.

Don't feel you are "butting in" because you don't understand the conditions of the prize competition. There are no conditions. The whole thing is as plain as daylight and you can't go wrong if you follow directions as it is.

Every regular reader of the paper is eligible and all have an equal show in the contest.

Here are two questions which you are invited to answer, but you are not required to send in your name and address to-day:

1—What feature or department in the SUNDAY AMERICAN do you like best, and why?

2—What features or department (also so suggested) do you consider in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN?

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN is the leading publication of the people when it comes to giving them what they want.

Study it, criticise it, and write it freely to compositor them for the time occupied in filling out the accompanying blank form.

MAN'S BONES GUARD BURIED GOLD COINS

SOUTH NORWALK, Ct., Jan. 29.—Charles Klein, the physician, unearthed a rich to-day when his gardener's spade revealed a gold mine in his garden. Close beside the gold were found human bones. The gold was in nuggets and in crudely modelled coins.

The Harm That Is Done by Our Friends

They Are Far More Dangerous Than Our Enemies

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

Thought lives through the ages, flies about over the earth, and goes on visiting fresh minds, after the mind that gave it birth has gone back to dust and nothingness.

An Italian wrote words to this effect:

"Man is commanded to forgive his enemies. Nowhere is imposed on him the far more difficult task of forgiving his friends."

Francis Bacon, the philosopher, read in England the words of the Italian and quoted them.

Vincent W. Byars, a very able thinking man of St. Louis, read Bacon's quotation out there, and now, coming to New York, he says to this writer:

"Why don't you make an editorial on that old Italian saying quoted by Bacon?"

Italy—England—St. Louis—New York—thus the idea has hopped about, until to-day you get it in this column. You read it, or at least glance at it; and so, if the idea has any value, it will go hopping on all over the earth's surface long after the steel press that prints this paper shall have crumbled away.

How little your ENEMIES can hurt you! How little harm they do, even when they try! You are warned against them and on your guard. The world knows they are your enemies, and discredits what they say.

It is quite easy to forgive our enemies, for they do us comparatively little harm.

But to forgive our friends would be hard indeed if we could realize how much harm they do us.

THE DRUNKARD'S FRIENDS.

Who makes the drunkard? His enemies? No. The drunkard is made by his friends.

When it is known that he is inclined to drink no enemy is so vicious as to lead him on. No enemy slaps him on the back and begs him to take "just another drink." No enemy laughs down his poor, feeble attempts at reform. No enemy tells him that it will not hurt him "just this time," and that he really must not refuse to be a good fellow "just for once."

The drunkard is MADE a drunkard, is pushed into the last depths of drunkenness, by his friends.

And it is his friends who kick him and leave him and despise him when he has sunk into the mire.

Did ever the drunkard's enemy hurt him as much as the friend has hurt him?

AMBITION KILLED BY FRIENDS.

A young man starts out to succeed in life.

His enemy may lie about him, may call him worthless. He may think he is hurting him. If there is anything in the young man, the enemy's lies and discouraging words only spur him on to greater effort. They do him good.

It is the friend that ruins the young man by false, injudicious, unearned praise.

As artist, poet, writer, clerk, or in any other effort, the young man begins his work.

It is his friends who tell him that he is a splendid success, when he needs to be told that, at best, he has some slight chance of success, and that everything depends on desperate effort.

Look at the young, conceited fool who, instead of struggling on, rails at the world, feels that he is not appreciated. He is a failure—a sad, foolish failure. He has been made a failure, not by the attacks of his enemies, but by the more dangerous praise of his friends.

The lonely and friendless often succeed amazingly. "Multum incola fuit anima mea" ("My spirit hath been much alone") said the great Bacon. His mind fed on loneliness, on failure, and even on disgrace.

How much success is due to freedom from that harm which friendship does?

The reader can finish this editorial for himself with hundreds of other arguments. This is enough for a sample.

How the Word 'Incurable' Does Deadly Work

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

ACTING upon a suggestion made by Christian Larsen and commented upon in this column, that the institutions bearing the pernicious name of "Homes for Incurables" should change their titles to something more helpful, an enterprising attorney in the State of Illinois has framed the following bill, which he intends to present to the State Legislature:

Whereas certain charitable institutions of the State are named and known as homes and places of the incurable; and

Whereas many persons who have been pronounced incurable by skilled physicians, alienists and specialists have afterward been cured; and

Whereas it is believed and insisted by many persons competent to judge that the name incurable militates against the health and happiness of the inmates of the charitable institutions of the State; and

Whereas the using of the word incurable as a name of, or connected with, a charitable institution, can be of no benefit whatever to the inmates thereof; therefore

Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly:

Section 1—That the word "incurable" be not used in connection with any of the charitable institutions of the State of Illinois as a name or otherwise.

Section 2—That where the word "incurable" is, or has been used in connection with, or as a name of any of the charitable institutions of the State of Illinois, the same be changed, and that other more encouraging and suitable words and names be hereafter used.

Change "Charities," Too

The next step to take in this line is a movement to change the names of Organized Charities and Associated Charities to some less humiliating title.

These societies, to my personal knowledge, do much good. That is, as much good as it is possible for money to do which is bestowed without the personal note of sympathy, in trying to alleviate the sufferings of the unfortunate in this present competitive and mistaken system of ours.

I have known a deserving woman with an invalid husband to be helped an entire year by the Societies of Organized Charities, and the help was given delicately and kindly, and no one but the friend who interested the society in her knew of it.

Yet many others needing similar aid have been hindered from accepting it by the ugly name of the organization.

It would be far easier for any sensitive and refined person, who had come to a pass where financial assistance was imperative, to apply to a "Society of United Helpers," or "The Associated Friends in Need," or the "Organized Assisters," than to turn to an institution bearing the glaring name of "Associated Charities."

Like a Blow in the Face

The average individual of any feeling shrinks from the thought of accepting public charity; and when he arrives at a place where such a course lies between him and starvation he ought to be spared the blow in the face of hearing, or seeing, such an offensive name applied to the institution where he applies for assistance.

"The Lord's Leaders" would be a good name for such societies; and how much easier it would be for some sad soul, fallen into hard ways by accident or temporary misfortune, to feel that he had received help from the "Lord's Leaders" than from the "Associated Charities."

"Reform School" is another odious name, which should be abolished. The boy or girl who has once been in such an institution bears the stain forever.

Children are rarely responsible for the misdeeds which send them to these institutions. They are the victims of wrong conditions, and of the neglect of those who have reared them.

No child lovingly and wisely taught for the first ten years of its life ever went to a reform school.

No More "Reform Schools"

Every school dedicated to the instruction of incorrigible children should bear a different name from any other school of the same nature elsewhere. In this manner all the names would escape the opprobrium which hangs upon such a universal title as "Reform School."

"School of Higher Endeavor," "School of Progress," "Institution of Perpetual Effort," "College of New Hope" are a few names which would be suitable substitutes for the ugly words "Reform School."

And in all these institutions the science of brain building, first brought to the notice of the thinking world by Professor Elmer Gates, of Chevey Chase, should be taught.

Were this once inaugurated, we would soon be able to do away with all reform school ideas.

Let us get rid of the name, at least.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

ONE MORE JOB FOR THE RETIRING FINANCE COMMISSION

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I doubt if it is possible to completely clean streets of snow after any considerable fall so that walking will be good, but I think that in Boston it would be possible to have the cross walks in better shape in the downtown district. I suppose that the main thing that prevents the street cleaning department from doing this is the lack of money. Enough could be obtained for the purpose, however, by dispensing with the number of City Hall attaches who do little work during the year except in campaign times, and then for the ward bosses who get them municipal jobs. The Finance Commission should not retire from business without scanning city payrolls a little closer.

OBSERVER.

WANTS A POLICEMAN

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

If the police of Boston would pay less attention to teams and teamsters in the present traffic upheaval, I think we poor folks that walk would be better off. If there is one place in Boston where people's lives are in danger every minute, it is where the electric cars come whirling into Summer street from Hawley. It is one of the busiest corners of Boston's narrow streets. Yet I never saw an officer stationed there. Maybe there will be one when another bad accident happens. Why not now.

SUMMER STREET.

SAYS MINISTERS SHOULD NOT MIX IN POLITICS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I read in the news of the day about a minister of the gospel sending a letter to an Aldermen and calling him names; also that a number of clergymen are framing a petition against the building of more warships. It seems to me that they would do well to confine themselves to their own field—religion—and let politics alone. What do you think about it? J. H. C. Roxbury.

THE CAUSE OF CONSUMPTION.

Editor Boston American:

Congestion of population is in a great measure responsible for consumption. The single tax would do away with the congestion of population and thereby do more to rid humanity of the terrible disease than the spending of millions of dollars in palliatives.
